How About A New Jersey — Pepper?

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

VINELAND, N.J — More than ever, the "tomato" state is taking on new commodity brethren — peppers, specialty herbs, even asparagus — as hot agricultural commodities.

Even one of the longest running produce auctions in the state, Vineland Produce, located in Vineland, boasts its own red-hot item: peppers. "That was the top-selling item last year," said Vince Malazita, auction manager.

Malazita spoke to about 45 produce growers and agri-industry representatives Wednesday morning during the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association (PVGA) Field Tour to South Jersey.

Growers toured several farms in the Cumberland County, N.J. area, in addition to the auction and several packers.

On the bus tour, Dr. Wesley L. Kline, ag agent with commercial vegetable production at Rutgers Cooperative Extension, Cumberland County, said that more and more growers are bringing peppers to the auction or arranging for independent packaging, processing, and marketing of "Jersey Fresh" peppers.

About 70-80 percent of the peppers grown are staked. "This provides a better quality of fruit and the fruit doesn't touch the plastic," said Kline.

Growers use a modified Florida weave, using two strings, which maintain healthier branches and allow easy harvest.

Garden State growers are using

Newsletter Features Grazing Health Benefits, Unique Crops

Foraging Around*, a special quarterly section dedicated to the forage grower and grazier with information supplied by the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC), is included in this issue. Duane Hertzler, who owns three farms on his Moo-Echo Dairy in Perry County, talks about the health (and other) benefits of grazing. He stands at the farm sign with wife June, next to him, and daughter Heather, in front with dog Dutch. Read more about the Hertzlers and about a Susquehanna County dairy farmer who uses unique crops in his grazing program in the special section. Photo by Andy Andrews

Rainfall Lack Signals Impending Crisis

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) is concerned about how the lack of rainfall across the state is affecting farmers.

"While we hope the dry weather doesn't persist, farmers should start preparing to seek disaster aid if and when it becomes available," said PFB President Guy Donaldson.

Recently the American Farm Bureau Federation unveiled the AgRecovery Action Plan. This is a proposal for an emergency farm assistance package that would provide financial help for farm families caught in today's farm economic crisis. A part of this plan is calling for contingency funding for 1999 weather disasters.

According to John Cameron of th U.S.D.A.'s Farm Service Agency, 16 counties have requested the emergency haying and grazing on conservation reserve and conservation us land. The counties are Cameron, Carbon, Clarion, Clearfield, Elk, Forest, Jefferson, McKean, Monro, Potter, Somerset, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Venango, Warren, and Wyoming. As an adjunct member of the State Drought Task Force, USDA, continues to monitor the drought situation on a biweekly basis.

Farmers across the state are becoming increasingly concerned with the lack of rainfall. Carl Shaffer of Millville, Columbia County is concerned because his crop of green beans is at a critical stage. "If I don't receive a substantial amount of rain soon, I will see a definite drop in production," said Shaffer, PFB vice president.

"The corn is beginning to curl up and the alfalfa needs a couple days of steady rain," said Adam Kopp of Stoneylawn Farm, Middletown, Dauphin County. "Even if we got a quick inch of rain from a thunderstorm, it would not do much good. The ground is so hard only a little would seep in and the rest would run off. That is why a steady rain for a few days is becoming so crucial."

Delmarva Broiler

ATLANTA, GA.

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was generally noted as light to fair at best and typical of normal mid-week activity Offerings were fully adequate to ample on the 2.5 pound size; adequate and in fairly good balance on the heavier sizes. Live supplies were at least moderate; weights were mostly desirable to light. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 56 to 68 cents. Trade sentiment was steady to barely steady. In the parts complex wings cleared at higher trending prices. Leg items were readily available and difficult to clear. Breast items were fully adequate. Tenderloins were in excess.

National Egg Markte

ATLANTA, GA

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE

Prices continued unchanged to higher on the larger sizes, unchanged on the balance. The market tone was fully steady to firm on the larger eggs, mostly steady on the smaller sizes. Demand was mostly moderate to good, with best interest noted into the increased feature activity. Supplies were short on the the West Coast; elsewhere, the larger sizes were in close balance to tight. The medium and smaller eggs were usually adequate. Breaking stock supplies were adequate to fully adequate from regular sources, and the demand for additional eggs was light, however, some trading was noted at higher levels for quality breaking stock. Light type hens were fully adequate to ample for processors' needs.

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO
Wed Jul 14, 1999
USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News
DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Grain and soybean bids took a breather from their recent sharp declines. Wheat steady to 5 cent higher. Corn 2 to 4 cents higher. Sorghum 8 cents higher. Soybeans mixed. The trade thought that recent sharp declines had been overdone and a little correction was necessary. New lows have been established on the Boards for the past several days. Very mild and dry July weather for the past few days has enveloped for a large part of the country. This has been very beneficial for wheat harvest and the pollination of early corn. However, the heat and more dry weather in the forecast but this is summer time. The shock of Monday's stock, use, and crop production reports wearing thin. Wheat harvest is moving up into the tier of states, as far North as South Dakota. Continued good yields and protein counts are re- ported. Corn exports were huge last week and getting substantial tonnage announcements today.

The Building you want.
The Lease you need.

Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 35 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated write-offs: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: As little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms from five to fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

First: Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost.
Then: Call your Telmark representative for your financing.

OPINION

Won One

Well it looks like farming won one in a battle of the Environmental Protection Agency regulations related to strict new air quality regulations imposed in 1997. The new regulations would illegally burden agriculture with significant costs without producing any health or other benefits. In other words, the regulations were an attempt in a continuing series of attempts to limit the ability of American agriculture to produce an abundance of food and keep America strong.

EPA attempted to establish new ambient air quality standards for ozone and particulate matter, creating standards far more stringent than existing regulations. Not only would the additional expensive anti-pollution costs to petroleum, trucking, and manufacturing companies have been passed on to farmers in added input costs on the farm, the regulations to limit dust from agricultural operations was indefensible. To produce food from the ground you have to have some dust.

In court, EPA was ordered to either articulate an intelligible principle to support the concentration levels it selects for ozone and particulate matter or turn to legislation to address the issue The EPA can not legitimately address fine and coarse particle pollution through a single regulation. EPA will have to establish independently justified standards for each type of pollution. Be assured this new court decision will be challenged.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Look at Alfalfa Harvest

According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, new seedings of alfalfa made this spring are beginning to come into bloom but are short. This is making harvesting a little difficult in many areas. Many farmers are wondering whether to harvest or wait for the plant to get more height. Alfalfa plant growth habits have the plant sending a signal to the roots to begin producing new stems when the plant begins to bloom. Thus, when the plant produces flower buds, it will grow very little.

The feeding quality of the plant will begin to increase in fiber and decrease in protein. With these facts in mind, the best approach to managing both new seeding and established alfalfa stands that is short but has begun to bloom is to mow it. If there is sufficient alfalfa to make hay then bale it otherwise leave it in the field.

To Control Leafhopper

An increasing number of alfalfa fields are showing damage to potato leafhopper, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent. He recommends that all alfalfa fields which have been mowed recently and will not be mowed in the next 7 to 10 days to be sprayed for leafhoppers.

If fields wiill be mowed beyond the 10 day period and are showing leafhopper damage, you should consider mowing them early and spraying the stubble after harvesting. Remember, leafhoppers cause stunting of the alfalfa plant and the plant will not grow out of the damage until it is cut and sprayed.

To Look at Emergency Forage Crop

If dry weather continues, additional forages may be needed, reports Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent. The Brassicas are a family of plants that include rape, kale, turnip and swede. They are well adapted to forage production.

Growth characteristics and maturity differ between the different brassicas. They contain high levels of crude protein and digestible energy. The fiber content of brassicas is very low. Animals being feed brassicas as forage should receive supplemental hay.

Brassicas should not make up more than two thirds of the animal's diet Brassicas may be seeded through mid summer and into August for fall and early winter grazing or green chopping. Some recommendations to follow are:

1. Seed in well drained fields.
2. Do not seed deeper than one half inch.
3. In sod, a herbicide that will suppress the sod is desirable. and
4. Apply 75 pounds of nitrogen to stimulate growth.

Feather Prof.'s Footnote: "It does not matter where you are in life. It is the direction you are headed that counts."

Editor:

I was in 4-H during the 1950s and '60s and collegiate FFA in the '70s. I was a 4-H specialty leader (taught dairy judging) in the late '70s and now am leader of a generalized interest 4-H club.

During the 1980s I attended many shows and fairs as a spectator. I noticed something very wrong in the barn areas. Too many times parents or other adults are doing the actual grooming for the youth. From all I learned, this is illegal.

Now I wonder about other areas - cooking and sewing in particular.

When I was in 4-H my parents only help was "verbal encouragement," When I made my 4-H uniform dress and jacket, my aunt, who was a professional seamstress, talked me

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THIS IS A TEST!

July 18, 1999

Background Scripture:
Genesis 22:1-18
Devotional Reading:
Daniel 3:16-26

I have been writing Bible Speaks for 33 years. So, understandably, I have encountered many of these texts and written about them with some frequency. That doesn't include the times I have also encountered them in my own Bible study, preaching and teaching. That is certainly true of the story of Abraham, Isaac and the sacrifice on Mount Moriah.

Yet I am often surprised to find that, upon reading these texts again, something entirely new arises from them to please, puzzle or trouble me. So, today when I re-read Genesis 22, I was perplexed to find a problem that had previously escaped me. I tried to put myself in Abraham's place and decided that, even on my best day before my Creator, I couldn't even begin to do what Abraham did and was prepared to do.

It is not that I decided that there were some things in this world I could not sacrifice to God, but that the fratricidal killing of a loved one is something I could never believe to be the will of God, even if my dreams and vision told me that is exactly what he wanted of me.

ABRAHAM THE ROBOT?

Earlier today I was troubled also by Abraham's attitude. There are no questions, no pleas for clarification, no protests. God wants to take away Abraham's most precious possession, his beloved son Isaac, and we are told simply, "So Abraham rose early in the morning... and took two of his young men with him, and his son Isaac" (22:3). Follow the story to its climax atop Mount Moriah and you will see the same zero-level attitude of complete, unquestionable compliance. Abraham is performing like a puppet or robot! How can this be a test of his faith, asking him to do something so repugnant and immoral?

Abraham didn't complain to God, but I did! I was annoyed with Abraham, the writer of Genesis, the Uniform Lesson committee that selected this passage under the heading, "A Test of Faith," and most of all with God! And because I was willing to voice my irate protests, God perhaps gave me some answers that have never occurred to me before!

First, it occurred to me that, given the culture in which Abraham lived, a culture where child sacrifice was practiced among his neighbors, maybe this really was a test by God. Today, it would not be a test, for we know, as maybe Abraham did not know, that God would abhor the sacrifice of a child much more than we. Despite the different current varieties of Christian faith and our doctrinal differences, today, no one bearing the name Christian would consider for one moment that God wanted the sacrifice of a precious human life. But Abraham did not know what we know, for he came before, not after, Jesus Christ. God could very well be testing to see whether Abraham could give up to God his most prized possession.

TESTING GOD

Secondly, I began to wonder whether this incident in Genesis 22 might also be Abraham's attempt to test God. That might explain his unquestioning, unprotesting attitude. Perhaps he never intended to slay his son on Mount Moriah, but wanted to see how far the Lord might permit him to go! I know that may sound incredible to you, but think of it: just as God needs to test us, do we not need also to test him? That is, do we not also need to know what kind of God we worship and serve? I can worship and serve only the God revealed to me in Jesus Christ and no other!

Regardless of these questions, the key to the story is found in Abraham's words uttered in faith before he knew the outcome. Isaac asks, "Behold the fire and the wood; but where is the lamb for a burnt offering?" and Abraham replies, "God will provide himself the lamb for a burnt offering, my son." Moments later, when he discovered God's true intentions, he found that the Lord had, in fact, provided for himself the sacrifice. And he "called the name of that place The Lord will provide." (22:14).

That was the key to Abraham's faith, as it must be also to ours: "The Lord will provide."

through setting the sleeves, but every stitch (plus those pulled out and done over) was my own work. When I had a vegetable project, my father did do the initial rototilling, but I was only 8 years old and too tiny to handle the 5HP Troybilt we owned. It's handles came to my shoulders!

When I showed my own horse, my father would lead Pinky to the gate, but that was because Pinky was very spirited and needed an extra firm hand holding him in a crowded situation, for others safely.

My husband showed steers and made it to state competition on full size tractors in the late '50s. He had the same help I did - verbal assistance at home and only encouragement by knowing those who cared were watching ringside.

Right now is show/fair season. How many young people will receive premiums for their own actual work? How many premiums will youth get because they have an "edge" by having their parent or a professional groomer get the animal ready?

4-H and FFA are learning experiences. If you want perfection on a professional level go to the breed shows and sales. Let these kids learn by doing and correct their own mistakes themselves.

I'm now allowing my children to compete this year for two reasons. One is what I just mentioned – too much adult "help" to many junior competitors and second – my children waited until the last minute to get their act together and had the nerve to ask their oldest sister (past 4-H age) and me to get their projects ready. I could have easily done it that way. It would have saved a lot of frustration and tears – but NO! What my children get, they earn. I consider myself a professional – I used to be paid to train horses and show other peoples horses in big shows. I get paid for sewing clothes and quilts. I used to operate my own baked goods and produce stand.

My children will learn like I had to – by doing it themselves, not by me doing it for them.

TOBACCO BLUE MOLD

CONTROL IT WITH

ACROBAT®

MZ FUNGICIDE

DIRECTIONS FOR USE IN FIELD GROWN TOBACCO

Application Rates and Timing Chart To Control Blue Mold

Weeks Of Growth After Transplant	Rate Of ACROBAT MZ (Pounds of Product)	Water Output (Gallons/Acre)
Recently Transplanted to 3 weeks after transplanting	0.50	20
3-4 weeks after transplanting (Knee High)	1.0	40
4-5 weeks after transplanting (Waist High)	1.5	60

Note: Above directions are for dilute sprays. If concentrate sprays are used, adjust rate and volumes proportionately, e g. for mist blowers, use a 2X concentrate and 1/2 the spray volume

Begin applications when the Blue Mold Advisory states that conditions favor development of blue mold, and before the onset of disease infection. Continue applications on a 5-7 day spray schedule until weather conditions favoring infection and sporulation decrease. Discontinue sprays when and if the threat of blue mold subsides.

ACROBAT MZ can only be used in a preventative spray program to manage blue mold in tobacco. Total plant coverage is essential to achieve maximum disease control with ACROBAT MZ. ACROBAT MZ must be used in accordance with the label.

Oklahoma City Feeder Cattle

Oklahoma City, OK
Wed July 14, 1999

USDA-OK Dept Ag Market News

Oklahoma National Stockyards - Weekly Cattle Summary

Compared to two weeks ago: Feeder steers 1.00 higher, feeder heifers 2.00-3.00 higher. Stockers 3.00-4.00 higher, few calves steady. Demand very good. Buyers aggressive with cheap feeds the driving force. Quality of supply plain to average, few attractive. Weigh-ups average. Feeder flesh condition medium; calf flesh medium to moderately fleshy. Slaughter cows 2.00 higher. Slaughter bulls .50 lower. Demand very good for cows, bulls, and replacement cows and pairs. Consignment of high quality Brangus pairs and bred cows sold, however bulk of replacements lower quality cows. Total of 500 cows and bulls sold with 40 percent to packers. Receipts this week 9,400; last week 1,005; last year 16,240. Supply consisted of 74 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 21 percent calves; 5 percent cows and bulls. 43 percent of feeder supply was heifers. Prices follow with weighted average weight and price in parenthesis.

National Holstein Awards Five Scholarships

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — The National Holstein Women's Scholarship Organization awarded five $1000 scholarships at the National Holstein Convention held in Boise Idaho.

The 1999 winners were:

Nathan Dorshorst of Junction City, Wisconsin, will be entering his sophomore year at the University of Wisconsin-Madison this fall where he is majoring in dairy science. He says that he is very confident in the future of the dairy industry. After graduation Nathan plans to attend vet school and eventually return to his home area with a large animal practice.

Leah Hurtgen of Elkhorn, Wisconsin, an animal science major, will be a junior at Cornell University in the fall. She is enrolled in the Cornell-in-Washington program for the fall term. Leah is looking toward a career in agriculture, possibly in agricultural law and public policy.

Julie Kelsey of Canastota, New York, attends Cornell University where she will be a sophomore this fall. She has been a Cornell Presidential Research Scholar assisting with research with CLA. Julie enjoys research and would like to continue throughout her undergraduate career. After graduating with a bachelors degree in animal science, Julie plans to work in research for an agribusiness.

Kristin Myers of New Windsor, Maryland, will be a sophomore at Cornell University in the fall. She is majoring in animal science with an emphasis in business, taking classes in the University's Agricultural Resource and Managerial Economics Department. Kristin plans to pursue a career in agribusiness after her graduation.

Staci Zilles of Logan, Utah, is attending Utah State University part time while working at her home farm as herdsman. She plans to graduate with a degree in Dairy Science with a double minor in agriculture economics and agriculture business. Staci would like to return home and continue to manage the family farm.

Applicants for the HWSO scholarship fill out a detailed description of their dairy activities to be viewed by the panel of judges before being interviewed. Individuals are judged based on their involvement on the home farm as well as the industry as a whole. Judges are also looking for a well rounded knowledge of the industry.

DOPP Participants Vary On Put Option Usefulness

SANDY BRADLEY
Mercer/Crawford Cos.
Correspondent

GROVE CITY (Mercer Co.) — As round one of the USDA Dairy Options Pilot Program (DOPP) winds down, and many of its futures contracts expire, numerous farmers — some who participated, some who did not — are taking a hindsight look at the program.

They are asking themselves: How, if at all, can trading in milk futures help stablize on-farm finances?

The DOPP program was implemented by USDA's Risk Management Agency and, with subsidies and training, enabled dairy farmers in certain geographic areas of the United States to trade — or "hedge" — in milk futures contracts.

The program was meant to provide farmers with a way to control their incomes if milk prices fell to intolerable levels.

In Pennsylvania, enrollment was highest in Crawford County, where many farmers said they hesitate to label DOPP as a fix for losses incurred due to low prices of milk.

One of the initial problems during round one of the program, most farmers interviewed agreed, was the small window of time for which participants could buy the contracts.

Since the program began in January, and enrollees were required to receive training before selecting an approved broker, most participants missed the deadline for purchasing contracts with desirable strike prices for February and March — when milk prices plummeted.

In subsequent months, when prices began to inch back upward, farmers purchased contracts because the program stipulated that contracts be purchased during a six- to eight-month time frame.

Consequently, many participants purchased the put options for times in which prices were stabilized, and this form of insurance was less necessary.

Many farmers also commented that, while the program provided an education in terms of purchasing options, without the 80-percent government subsidy, the risk wouldn't have been worth the investment.

"The cost was way too high for not very much protection," said Saefertown dairyman Tom Wilson, who, after attending the training sessions, decided against hedging.

"There was no point in locking in prices that were so low. If you did this over the years, all you would do would be to add to the cost of production," Wilson said.

"I don't understand how they think this is a strategy that beneftis farm income. While there are times you will guarantee your price won't go beneath a certain level, often all you would do was spdn 10-, 20-, 30-cents per hundredweight.

"My question is, 'Why?'

"How is this a program that actually benefits dairy farmers? The only application I can see would be where a farmer needed a guarantee for the bank. I can see where it has a use there," Wilson said.

"If the purpose was to teach dairy farmers about the market, they certainly did that with me, but I didn't see the benefit as far as dairy farmer income."

Although after attending the educational session Sue and Richard Pegan of Cochranton did participate in the program, Sue said that she and Richard share the sentiment that, without the subsidy, heding during the predetermined sixth-month window would have resulted in monetary loss.

"We put in $330 of our own money," explained Sue. "If we would have had to put in the 100-percent, we would have been about $1,200 down. The only month you'd have made good money was between January and February. It was a heck of a drop there."

Because timing was responsible for the lack of success with many participants, the Pegans, like many others, said they are not ruling out hedging in the future as a form of income insurance — even when subsidies aren't available.

This is the third in a three-part series on the USDA Dairy Options Pilot Program (DOPP) published in consecutive weeks in Lancaster Farming. The first part provided an introduction to the DOPP, the second story reported on farmer participation, and this report by Sandy Bradley provides some of the opinions from those who participated, as well as some who didn't. The issue is important because federal dairy policy is currently under proposal for dramatic change, and USDA commodity price support programs are to end this year. At the same time, dairy and agricultural political efforts are promoting the reauthorization and expansion of dairy pricing compacts in different regions of the United States as a means to protect the production industry from short-term extremes in market swings of dairy prices that can cause long-term damage. In an effort to help United States' dairy producers, the DOPP program was developed by the USDA as a means by which to transition dairy producers to using existing commodity market devices to protect operational cash flow.

How About A New Jersey — Pepper?

drip irrigation with black plastic, "typical of most farmers here," said Kline, with transplants coming from houses. The greenhouse-grown product is planted into the floor of the house, according to tradition.

One farm on the visit makes use of migrant laborers to plant, maintain, harvest, and cool-store and ship peppers. Sheppard Farms, operated by three brothers, all Cornell University graduates — David Jr., Tom, and Erwin — farm about 900 acres near Cedarville. Products include peppers, lettuce, cucumbers and, for rotational purposes, wheat, soybeans, and clover.

David, who said the farm packages under Eastern Fresh Growers, farms 250 acres of iceberg lettuce, cucumbers, and peppers and 50 acres of fresh market tomatoes. The season starts before spring when transplant iceberg lettuce is grown in greenhouses, followed by peppers and other crops. The vegetables are all grown on a staggered schedule to stretch the marketing season.

Peppers are planted May 10 to June 10 in the fields, in 45-inch center rows at 14 inches apart at a plant population of 10,000 per acre, with a plant height of about 8 inches. Harvest season begins in July. The Sheppards grew 40 acres of asparagus in 1997.

The migrant work force is about 90 percent Mexican, David said, with some workers from Puerto Rico. "The educational and income prospects are better here than in Mexico," he said. The workers are needed for a six-month period and are housed at the farm. Their earnings amount to about $10,000-$12,000 per year.

Ninety percent of the people return the following year to harvest and pack the produce. They use about 75 harvest employees from April to the end of October.

Sheppard said they take care of the workers at the farm.

"It's important to treat your people as you want to be treated yourself," he said. "If you don't have a good labor force, you don't have a good product to sell." The picking is all done by hand, most common for nearly all growers in Cumberland County. Picking quality produce, getting it cooled, and keeping it cold until delivery are critical.

The Sheppards face crucial challenges, competing not only against regional growers but against California, which can ship product into the area at discount rates — lower than cost of production. "I don't know how they can grow it so cheaply in California, but I suppose they can grow anything like that in California," he said.

Peppers are picked early in the morning, before the heat of the day, to avoid plant and harvest damage. They are mechanically sorted, cleaned, graded, and boxed — 45 peppers to a box.

Women comprise about a third of the packing house labor. Children are allowed to set boxes but aren't allowed, by law, around machinery.

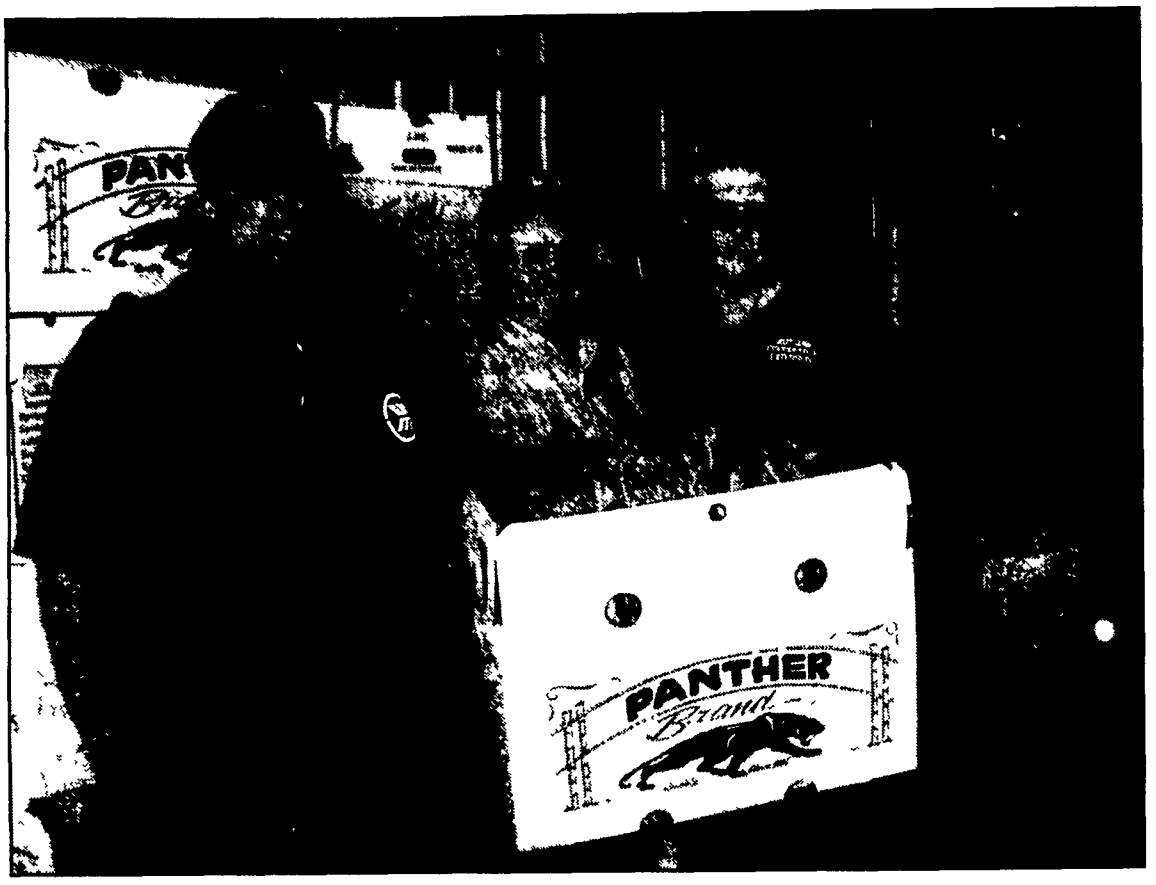
The processing plant has year-round cold storage, fully enclosed and insulated. Some time ago a fire destroyed the entire storage facility and a new one was constructed.

A cooler in operation measures about 5,600 square feet. A cooler in the final stages of construction, with towering racks, measures about 4,000 square feet.

About 300,000 28-pound boxes of peppers, or 8.4 million pounds, are shipped from the plant each year. The peppers are pressure cooled and shipped to chain stores, direct buyers, and brokers. The farm handles about 28,000 cartons of lettuce, peppers, and cucumbers daily.

The farm spent about $1 million on the new cooling facility, which allows them to preserve a lot better product. A challenge is to keep produce cool from farm to store shelf. Product sitting on a dock after cooling can rapidly deteriorate in quality, Sheppard noted.

Sheppard noted that his brother Tom has a degree in marketing and ag economics from Cornell. David has a degree in agronomics and vegetable crop production from Cornell. Erwin is the ag engineer, also a Cornell graduate. They all use their skills in every aspect of the farm.



The tour group visited the Flaim & Sons Farm in Vineland, N.J. The 200-acre farm, according to Bob Flaim Jr., has been in existence since 1913, employs 35 migrant workers seasonally. From left, Kevin Flaim, Bob Flaim Sr., Wesley Kline, and Bob Flaim Jr.

The Sheppard family itself has farmed in the community for 300 years.

Sheppard noted to the tour group that the family is in the business of "business management," rather than simply growing a product. "You can get a lot more money in marketing rather than growing the stuff," he said. Simply getting another 25 cents a box, over the long term, adds up to improved farm profitability.

The farm marketing subsidiary, N.J. Eastern Fresh Growers, Inc., can also market products to retailers, even in "skid"-size lots from other growers. Chain stores will buy products, but "we have to tell them three to four weeks ahead what the price will be," noted David. Growers have to be able to hedge a little bit.

The Sheppards can even supply roadside stands.

The tour group also visited the Flaim & Sons farm in Vineland, N.J. The 200-acre farm, according to Bob Flaim Jr., has been in existence since 1913, employees 35 migrant workers seasonally and about five year-round. The farm houses 16 of the workers, half from Puerto Rico and half from Mexico.

The Flaim farm, like many others in Cumberland County, uses either drip irrigation or big guns. Most of the eggplant, tomatoes, and peppers are under black plastic with trickle irrigation. Here Roy Brendlinge, retired grower from Kittanning, Pa., inspects the peppers.

A processing house to pack and cool the vegetables was built about six years ago, noted Flaim. The produce is marketed under the Panther Brands label.

The third-generation farm, located in east Vineland, includes Robert Flaim Sr. and sons Robert Jr. and Kevin. They grow a lot of greens, including spring dandelion (actually chicory, which doesn't flower), green onions, arugula, dill, parsley, eggplant, collards, kale, Swiss chard, lettuce (including leaf, Boston, and romaine), cabbage, peppers, spinach, squash, and leeks on 160 acres.

With the Panther Brands label, produce is marketed through chain stores, produce cooperatives (a lot goes to the Vineland Auction regularly), and individual brokers.

Spring dandelion is a favorite — chicory which does not flower. They are planted in four-row strips.

The produce, such as cucumbers that were being packed on Wednesday, are hydrocooled until they arrive at the central packing house.

While much of the Northeast is suffering from a persistent drought, the "water supply is not an issue here," said Wesley Kline, extension agent. All the farms use some type of irrigation and, because of the high water table, wells are in abundance.

The farm, like many others in Cumberland County, uses either drip irrigation or big guns. Most of the eggplant, tomatoes, and peppers are under black plastic with trickle irrigation.

Everything else gets a solid set with center pivots, according to Kline.

Kevin Flaim said that the drip lines receive about 18-20 pounds of pressure, run every other day for about two and a half hours at a time. The farm uses 25-30 gallons of a 9-5-9 liquid with micronutrients.

In one nearby field, encompassing about eight acres, a variety of peppers were growing. The farm fumigates when necessary, at about 60 gallons per acre, to control diseases.

They also have a complete herbicide program, which is handled by Bob Jr.

Kevin pointed out the recent construction of a well pump, finished in 1998. The pump collects water from 200 feet deep at a rate of 1,200 gallons per minute. The pump can supply the fields with

(Turn to Page A26)

A processing house to pack and cool the vegetables was built about six years ago, noted Flaim. The produce is marketed under the Panther Brands label. Here, cucumbers are loaded for cooling.

Lacy Wins 1999 Kildee Scholarship

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Shannon H. Lacy, Canaseraga, N.Y. a Cornell University animal science major, will receive the 1999 National Dairy Shrine's prestigious Kildee Scholarship for Advanced Study.

The $3,000 scholarship is awarded annually to a junior or senior undergraduate who has excelled in dairy cattle judging and plans to attend graduate school.

Lacy has been accepted at the University of Wisconsin School of Veterinary Medicine and is to begin studies in Madison this fall. While working on his DVM, Lacy also may pursue a doctorate in dairy science.

Lacy grew up on a 60-cow seasonal dairy operation in western New York. He showed his first 4-H calf at the county fair when he was 10 years old. He was active in various 4-H and Junior Holstein Club activities, including dairy judging and dairy quiz bowls.

Last year at the National Intercollegiate Judging Contest, Lacy took first place individual overall and first place in oral reasons.

He also placed fifth in the Eastern State Intercollegiate Judging Contest.

While maintaining a 4-grade point throughout college, Lacy has been active in Cornell's Dairy Fellows Program, Dairy Science Club and Alpha Gamma Rho.

He received the College of Agriculture's outstanding undergraduate teaching assistant award for his work with students in diary cattle production and animal nutrition courses. And he was involved with cutting-edge research on conjugated linoleic acids (an anticarcinogenic compound) while participating in an honor's program. Last summer, he worked as an intern for Cargill Nutrena.

Lacy will be recognized for his achievements at the national Dairy Shrine awards banquet, to be held in conjunction with World Dairy Expo in Madison Wis. on Sept. 30.

The Kildee Scholarship is named for H.H. Kildee, longtime dean of Iowa State University's College of Agriculture. Kildee was an outstanding dairy cattle judge and a strong supporter of student judging programs. In 1950, the National Dairy Shrine established a scholarship in his honor.

Rainfall Lack

Not only has the lack of rainfall affected this year's crops, it has also put the state's ground water supply in jeopardy. Fifty-nine of the state's 67 counties are now under a drought warning and the remaining counties — Crawford, Erie, Elk, Forest, McKean, Mercer, Venango and Warren — are under a drought watch.

The final and most severe declaration is a drought emergency. Susan Rickens of the Department of Environmental Protection says it is expected that Gov. Ridge will declare a drought emergency within the next couple of weeks. "If we would get a substantial amount of rain in the next few weeks, it may prolong the declaration, but it will just come later this summer," said Rickens.

According to the Department of Environmental Protectin, ground water levels usually replenish themselves in the spring, but this year that did not happen. "Ground water levels just will not recover this year, so we are just hoping for some steady drenching rains to take some pressure off of farmers and residents," said Rickens.

Uebler has been manufacturing feeding machines for over 30 years From our extensive experience we know exactly what you want in a feeding machine

SILAGE/HAYLAGE

Uebler silage carts feature a forage box unloading design which provides even-feeding of materials into the jumbo 12" auger discharge Easily unloads all types of feed including the toughest silage

Uebler silage carts come in two sizes Model 810 holds 30 bushels and Model 812 holds 43 bushels Both riding models feature easy turning automotive-type steering and a comfortable, adjustable chair A convenient foot pedal or hand control engages the feed mechanism and an easy-acting hand control operates the hydrostatic transmission

Exclusive center pivot makes Uebler the most maneuverable riders available today And Uebler's simple design and durable materials are backed up with a two year guarantee

FORAGE BOX UNLOADING DESIGN

No need for costly variable speed unloading mechanism Spiral beater prevents bridging – provides even-feeding of materials into the auger discharge Easily unloads all types of feed including the toughest haylage

MANEUVERABLE

Center pivot is designed into each Uebler machine by positioning the pivot wheels as close to the center of the machine as possible This minimizes the turning radius giving Uebler the best possible combination of maneuverability and carrying capacity available anywhere

Also, like many other local farmers, the Pegans said that, if given unlimited time frames in which to project and take advantage of desirable strike prices with reasonable premiums, they believe that over time trading in milk futures contracts could be a viable way to gain some control over the ever-changing price floors for milk.

One drawback, Sue added, was that in order to take advantage of the most desirable price floors and time frames, farmers need to stay on top of what prices are doing.

Although brokers and extension agents distributed newsletters and market information as often as once per week, the information was sometimes out of date by the time it arrived by conventional mail.

Many participants agreed that for the best opportunities, hedgers should hook into Internet services that provide current information. They said that, even without Internet capabilities at home, during their DOPP participation they regularly accessed current information by using the library's Internet service.

"Everyone hedging pretty much had to be online," said Craig Hayes of Edinboro.

"If you want an active pricing, you have to subscribe to a service ...," he said. "Free services basically give you the closing prices; you can't check during the day to see if that position is available for the price you're willing to pay. Otherwise, you'd be on the phone all day with your broker.

"It might work out okay for a farmer who farmed in his office or a larger operation where somebody was office-dedicated that could follow up on those things. But it would be pretty hard for a single operator to stay on top of it."

Although many participants said they saw little benefit to hedging within the limited time frame imposed by round one of DOPP, many added that, since they are now familiar with the process, they will continue trading futures options after their subsidized contracts expire.

When discussing hedging with regard to Pennsylvania's possible membership in the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact, most said that, at this point, they view the Compact as a more reliable, less complicated means of price control — since floors set by the Compact would be more of an absolute.

Many also said that, for a variety of reasons, the benefits of buying put options can be reaped along with the price floors set by the Compact.

Some farmers say they believe that hedging and the Compact have different purposes: the compact is meant to set price floors, and hedging is meant for earning a profit.

Many hedgers, according to brokers, have become disheartened with DOPP for that very reason — they approached hedging as some would approach the stock market, hoping to make money.

But the intention of DOPP, they said, is for farmers to purchase put options as a form or insurance so only when milk prices drop to a level designated by the hedger do the contracts pay money to compensate.

Just as in the case of conventional insurance, brokers say, consumers should hope they don't need the payoff: dropped milk prices would be more significant than profits from milk futures contracts.

Lowell Agnew, a Conneaut Lake farmer who participated in DOPP, agreed that the objective is not to receive a big payoff.

"For a while I was up about $1,000, but that's not good, because that means the price of milk goes down," Agnew said. "If you're making money there (from the put option), you're losing money on the farm. A lot of people can't see that.

"As a business, you need to look at it as an expense; a price protection," Agnew said.

"And, throughout the year, if you did it every month, you would probably break even on it. I might end up costing you some money — maybe a nickle a hundred — but it would protect you against really low prices, and you'd benefit from higher prices. Over time you'd probably pretty much break even.

"It would take some of the peaks and valleys out of milk prices," he said. "The last three years, we've seen some pretty high peaks and some pretty big drops.

"I think you have to do this a few months in advance," Agnew said. "You've been losing all your money you put back into it in January, but you'd make it all back in April or May.

"But I don't know," he said. "That's just what I think would happen over time. If you look at it (over) just three or four months you could make it look really bad or really good."

Maryland State Holstein Association To Hold Picnic

QUEENSTOWN, Md. — The Maryland State Holstein Association has announced it is holding its state picnic at Pintail Point, located on Maryland's Eastern Shore, 11 a.m., July 21.

Also announced was that the state Junior Holstein Club members are to a'hold a meeting at 1 p.m., in conjunction with the state picnic.

To register for the event, call Karen Burris at the Pintail Point office at (410) 827-7029, extension 12.

Lunch is to be provided for all in attendance. Families are asked to bring a dessert to share.

Pintail Point is well-known in at least several circles.

It is known among Holstein breeders for its registered herd started in 1985.

It is known among waterfowl hunters for its duck hunting and history, and among wingshooters for upland game.

It is known among farmland preservationists in Maryland because it set a record for the largest single conservation easement sale in Maryland, otherwise known as farmland protection.

Pintail Point is a 1,000-acre private retreat in Queenstown, Maryland, that has a Holstein herd, and a resort that offers everthing from carriage rides to sea duck hunting.

For the state Holstein picnic, Pintail Point is provide a demonstration of waterfowl retrieving hunting dog techniques and abilities; a hay wagon tour; and for those interested in shooting sports, the resort's sporting clay range is to be opened.

The Junior Holstein Club is to meet to discuss a number of new projects for the upcoming year.

Following the meeting, a "barnyard olympics" event for youth is to be held.

Additionally, the Milk Promotion Committee is sponsoring a milk promotion poster contest for youth during the state picnic.

For all youth aged 8 and older, a calf raffle is also to be held with Pintail Point donating a December embryo-transfer Amel-sired calf out of a Very Good-87 Aerostar dam.

For more information on junior activities call Lisa Schwartzbeck at (410) 775-2445.

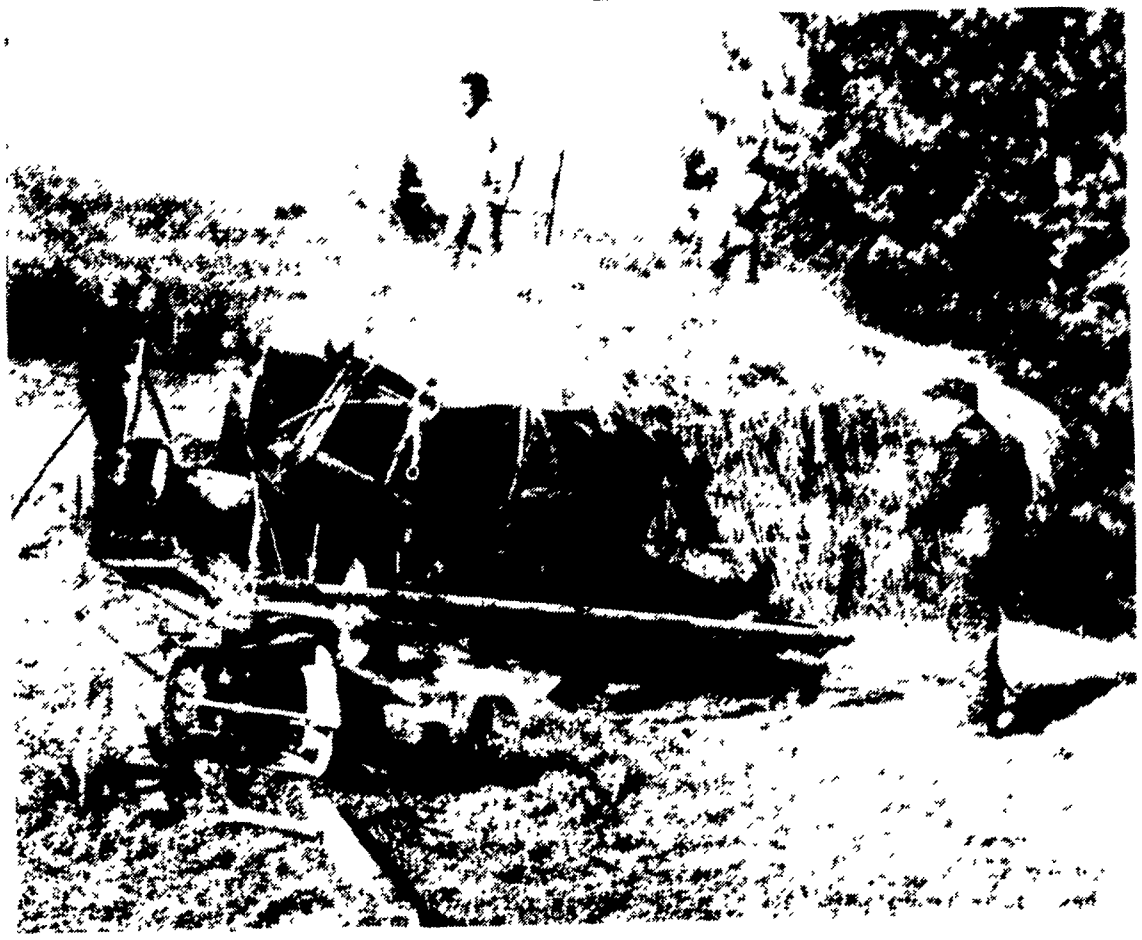
Darwin G. Braund, PH.D., Curator

Visitors to the Pasto Agricultural Museum, located at Penn State's Rock Springs Agricultural Research Center, journey back to a time when farmers used muscle power, both human and animal, to produce food and fiber for a growing nation. This regular Lancaster Farming column features photos and historical comments about the extensive collection found there. For more information call the museum office at 814/863-1383.



This O.K Panama Hay Press, manufactured in 1905-06 in Kansas City, MO, was powered by two horses walking in a 360-degree circle around the mechanism shown in the lower left corner of the picture. It required at least four men to operate. The Herbert Cowan family owned one of these presses in the early part of the century, and his son Dr. Robert Cowan, has donated the machine to the Pasto Agricultural Museum, at Penn State where it has been completely restored. Dr. Cowan's son Timothy Cowan recalls the early days when he and his "Grampap" would set up the O.K. Baler and operate it at the Canfield Fair. In the photo from left is Timothy Cowan, Robert Cowen Jr., Rick Taylor, a cousin, and Dr. Robert Cowan. --A Penn State University Pasto Agricultural Museum photo.

Horse Council To Meet

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) – The Lehigh Valley Horse Council (LVHC) will conduct a regular meeting and lecture on Thursday July 22.

The topic for the evening is Myotherapy presented by Nancy Bleam, C.B.P. M.

The meeting will be at Boots'N'Saddle Riding Club, Allentown. and will start at 7:30 p.m.

The public is welcome to this free lecture and meeting. For more information, call (610) 837-7294 or (610) 767-7346.

The Lehigh Valley Horse Council was formed in 1980 as an aid to the horse owners of the Lehigh Valley and surrounding areas. It has offered regular lectures on a bi-monthly basis, which are free and open to the public, and publishes a yearly horseman's directory distributed throughout the area.

Anyone wishing further information concerning the LVHC or one of its meetings is welcome to contact (610) 837-7294 or (610) 767-7346.

How About A New Jersey — Pepper?

150 sprinklers operating at 90 pounds of pressure.

According to Wesley Kline of the Cumberland County extension office, all the wells are certified by the state. If growers want to drill, they must obtain a certification from a qualified well driller. Growers must maintain a yearly water report on monthly use.

Now, according to Kline, growers must make daily water use logs, to show to the state.

If a serious drought were to take place in the county, agriculture gets their allocation. "At this point, ag has the first use of water," said Kline. Luckily, he noted, so far ag has not been mandated to reduce use by a certain percentage.

In addition, many of the growers in the county are hard- pressed to tackle a serious phytophthora rot problem, a fungus which attacks peppers, tomatoes, eggplants, and other produce.

Fumigation and rotational control methods are critical.

The PVGA tour included the Vineland Produce Auction in Vineland, N.J. According to Vince Malazita, auction manager, the farmer market cooperative works with 70-80 different farmers in the region, handling 100-110 different commodities each day. The auction works with 38-50 brokers in the area.

The farmer who wants to sell produce simply gets a number and is assigned a que. On the truck includes only a representative sample of the product to be auctioned — the best in a couple of boxes, at most.

The farmer drives up, unloads the representative box, and the item is bid on for later, same-day delivery.

The grade is based on the box itself. There are no USDA graders at the auction. Inside is a traditional amphitheater setup — similar to common livestock auctions. There are two lines of the auction, and boxes move quickly from the dropoff trucks to the conveyor system to be auctioned.

Vineland Produce employs two auctioneers, noted Malazita. If there is a real hot market for a commodity, the grower only needs to bring a sample to the auction — and it could be sold before it is picked. Vineland Auction commission rate is 4 percent.

After deducting costs of operation, money is returned to growers at the end of the year.

According to Hank James, platform cooler manager at Vineland, the product can be hydrocooled, with ice-cold water and refrigerated, or forced air cooled. The product can be cooled to 40-45 degrees quickly. All systems are computerized.

They can fit more than 300 tons of produce in one of two refrigeration chambers. One facility measures about 9,600 square feet and the other about 8,000 square feet, at 27 feet tall.

Cumberland County itself, according to ag agent Wesley Kline, is a "microcosm of crops grown in the United States," noted in a brochure he handed out to the PVGA tour participants.

There are more than 1,000 different nursery crops and ornamentals, more than 100 vegetables, field crops, small fruits, and tree fruits in the county. The growers are expanding their crop mix to keep farming viable into the next generation.

Affectionately known as the "Garden Spot of the Garden State," Cumberland County has 609 farms, with a 113-acre average farm size, according to 1992 census data. In 1992, there were 68,627 acres in farms in the county, comprising 22 percent of the total size of the county, with a population of 138,053. The county ranks first in the state in vegetable acre, in cabbage, eggplant, and lettuce production, and second in peppers. It ranks first in parsley, strawberry acreage, first in the number of certified nurseries, and first in flowering trees and shrubs, herbaceous perennials, and broadleaf evergreens.

Farms have taken $4,800 per acre for development rights under farmland protection, Kline noted. Most farm acreage sells for production at $5,000-$7,000 per acre.

Farming remains a challenge in the county, because "we're 30 minutes from Atlantic City," Kline said. "From here it's a straight shot to Atlantic City." Despite the proximity of development and closeness to urban centers such as Philadelphia, nurseries comprise "the largest ag industry in the county," he said.

The growers also toured the New Jersey Tomato Council in Cedarville and Seabrook Brothers in Seabrook, N.J.

At Vineland, the farmer who wants to sell produce simply gets a number and is assigned a que. On the truck includes only a representative sample of the product to be auctioned — the best in a couple of boxes, at most.

Sheppard Farms, operated by three brothers, all Cornell University graduates — David Jr., pictured here, and Tom, and Erwin — farm about 900 acres near Cedarville. Products include peppers, lettuce, cucumbers and, for rotational purposes, wheat, soybeans, and clover.

Student Earns Scholarship

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) – Lancaster Mennonite High School student Paul Hostetter attended the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives (PCC) Youth Training Institute this summer and earned a $750 scholarship to attend the National Institute of Cooperative Education to be held July 24-29 in Snowbird, Utah.

Hostetter, a member of LMH's Hans Herr FFA Chapter, is the son of James and Mary Louise Hostetter, Holtwood.

At the institute, Hostetter served as treasurer for the Minico Federated Board. He also placed second in his viewpoint speech, "Agriculture, Cooperatives and the Future."

FFA members James Mast, son of Herbert and Rhoda Mast, Morgantown, and Jason Rohrer, son of John and Bonnie Rohrer, Lancaster, also attended the training institute.

Lehman Metzler, adviser for LMH's Hans Herr Chapter, received the Hal Doran Outstanding Adult Resource Leader Award at the institute's awards banquet. Metzler served as adult resource leader at the event.

Farmer Shares Conservation Thoughts

By Andrew Bernard
Warren County, N.J.
Soil Conservation District

I caught Russell Smith, Pohatcong Township dairy farmer, on a sunny morning between barn chores and fieldwork. As with any farm, especially with dairy, there is never a lack of things that need to be done.

"I have about 120 cows, 60 of which are milking," according to Russ, "and with 500 acres to tend to, things are never dull."

Russell is a third generation dairy farmer. He graduated from Warren County Vocational Technical School in Washington, N.J. with a degree in welding and says it sure hasn't gone to waste being on the farm. He purchased the farm from his father 10 years ago and now, with help from his wife Karyn, who does a lot of the barnwork and finances, and the part-time "help" from his three children Lauren, Russell Jr. and Savannah, he's got a full family operation.

"Unfortunately dad had passed away a couple of years ago, but mom does a lot with the kids, esepcially when Karyn or I can't be there — like with after school sports," says Russell.

When it comes to his farm and resource conservation on a scale from one to 10, Russell feels he's a nine. "For years I've had grass waterways, terraces, practiced strip cropping and no-till and minimum till crop planting methods," Russell said. On top of these practices, Russell is enrolled in the Integrated Crop Management program sponsored by the North Jersey Resource Conservation and Development Council.

Tom Morgart, who is Russell's agricultural consultant from the North Jersey Resource Conservation and Development Council makes weekly visits to the Smiths' farm.

"Tom has been a great help in reducing my overall production costs. My weeds are under control, which has reduced my use of herbicides, and he has cut out a lot of the legwork that comes along with inspecting the fields," Russell commented.

The ICM Program offered by the NJRC&D helps farmers plan crop rotation, determine fertilizer schedules by soil sampling and visual inspections, develop insecticide and herbicide spray schedules by weekly field visitations, and provides technical information on new crop varieties.

Along with his existing conservation practices, Russell is hoping to get assistance from EQIP (Environmental Quality Incentives Program) and the New Jersey Conservation Cost-Share programs.

"I'd like to start a manure management program, construct fencing for the animals, and create a rotational grazing program," Russell said.

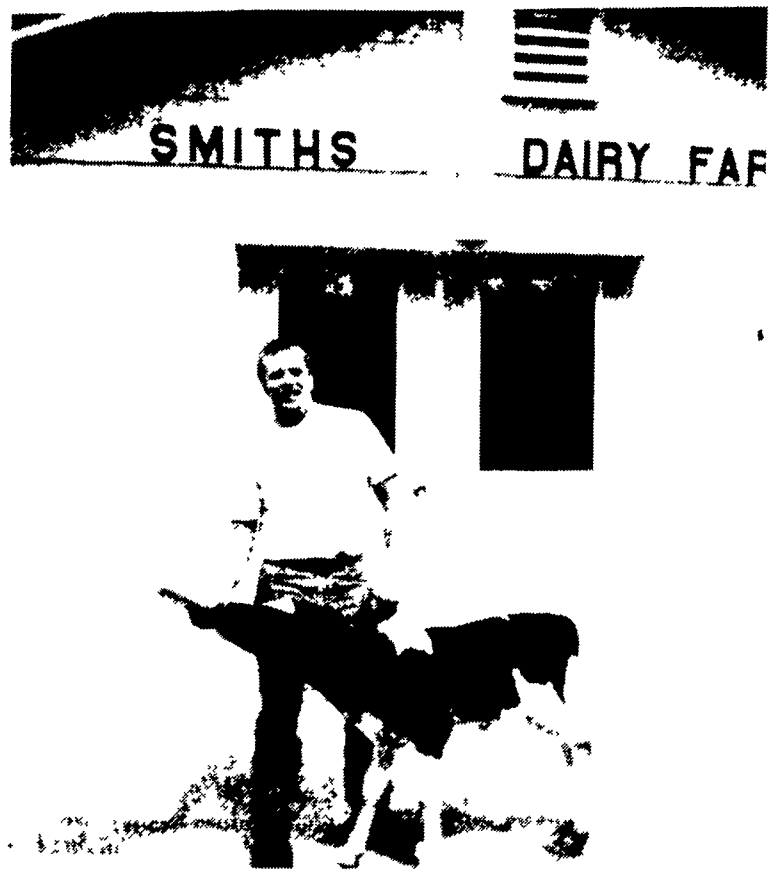
Establilshed in the 1996 Farm Bill, EQIP and the New Jersey Conservation Cost-Share Programs provide voluntary plans for farmers to conserve water, soil, and related natural resources. Nationally, these programs provide technical, financial, and educational assistance to install or implement structural, vegetative, and management practices within five- to 10-year contract period. He's been happy with the programs through the USDA NRCS and believes is the cost-share incentives have been adequate.

When it comes to water quality, Russell feels it's a group effort in order to keep the streams and rivers clean. "I think industry, farmers, and individual landowners have to work together to keep the rivers and streams clean. But generally I don't believe the public really knows what I have to go through on a daily basis to keep a dairy operation going. You can't take the weekend off and expect the animals to take care of themselves. Maybe if the non-agricultural community knew that we still exist and care about our community that we live in, the public's outlook on farmers might be different."

As we walked through the barn and out the milkhouse, I asked him what inspires him to keep farming.

"It's getting harder every day to get out of bed to keep doing this," said Russell, "but I want to keep the farm going for my next generation. Unfortunately with the way milk prices keep dropping, it's hard to see a future for the dairy business. Just last month my milk check dropped $3,500. It's been a slow and steady decrease, but never that drastic.

"I've got to try to keep up with the times and the new trends in the agricultural world. I might not be doing dairy for the rest of my life, maybe it will be veggies or another type of crop to make a profit, but in some way, shape, or form, it will be farming," Russell said.



Russell Smith cares for this 3-week-old calf at his New Jersey farm.

Chester Holstein Club Holds Field Day

PARKESBURG (Chester Co.) — The Chester County Holstein Club held its field day Thursday at the Parkesburg area farm of Samuel S. and Marian Stoltzfus, and children Jay, Beverly and Andrea.

According to Victor Stoltzfus, club president, at least 153 people attended the catered pork roast noon meal, with many entering the judging contest of groups from Stoltzfus's 80 cow herd with its 22,800 rolling herd average.

Guest speaker for the event was Phillip Jaquith, dairy field manager for Purina Mills.

Jaquith talked about the strong positive consumer reaction to the introduction of new fluid dairy products and packaging, as well as the strong consumption of cheese and other dairy products.

He said that while dairy farmers individually can not do anything about the price of milk, they should take heart in knowing that the consumers really support and want the dairy products made from the farmers' milk.

In other news, Abram Lee Stoltzfus, son of Samuel K. Stoltzfus, who farms in the Compass area, won the club calf.

The calf was donated by field day host Sam S. Stoltzfus, and is a daughter of Second Look Jolt.

The club field day calf contest is a tradition with the Chester Holstein Club that was restarted four years ago, after several years of dormancy.

In fact, Club President Victor Stoltzfus was a recipient of a field day calf in 1975, and he said he still has some of her offspring in his herd.

Purina Mills helps sponsor the initial growth of the calf, supplying the first six months of feed for the calf and his new owner.

In the judging competition, in the youth division the first three winners were Adam Grossman, Justin Smoke, and Katrina Lapp.

In the women's division, the first three, in order, were Jeanette Brook, Nancy Mae Stoltzfus, and Ruth Kauffman.

In the men's division, the first place winner and high scorer of the day was D.G. Kauffman with 148 points.

Tied for second place were Dick Hostetter and Ivan Stoltzfus. Tied for third were Rod Bare and Richard Mellinger.

Abram Stoltzfus won this well-pedigreed young heifer calf at the Chester County Holstein Club Field Day. Showing it for Abram are, from the left, Phillip Jaquith, guest speaker of the field day event, Club President Victor Stoltzfus, and Jay Stoltzfus, son of Samuel S. and Marian Stoltzfus, breeders of the calf.

Pa. Junior District Dairy Shows Start This Week

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The state junior (youth) dairy program is set to begin its two-month series of district qualifying shows, starting with the West Central District Show on Monday, July 19, in Prospect, and the Southeastern Show on July 20 at the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds.

Youth members of 4-H and FFA are both eligible to participate in any of the 12 district shows.

That change has been in effect for a couple of years, though some still refer to certain shows in terms of one youth development organization or the other.

It can be somewhat confusing, because, in cases such as the Southeast District show, there are actually two shows going by the same name. The second Southeast District show is set to be held August 24 at the Kutztown Fairgrounds. The early Southeast District show had been exclusively for FFA members, while the other had been for 4-H youth.

For the most part, show managership of district shows continues to reflect the former FFA or 4-H designation for whom the show had been first dedicated.

Each of the district shows is run by its own committee and some variances in show rules exist, as well in entry fees. The differences relate to differing costs for staging the contests, as well as local preferences for program structure.

Those interested in exhibiting at any of the 12 district junior shows should contact show managers directly to find out what specific rules and restrictions may apply.

Further, some 4-H programs restrict their own youth, regardless of the rules that apply at the district show. For example some 4-Hers have requirements that they must attend a certain number of 4-H meetings in order to submit an entry, or that they must qualify at their county level in order to qualify for district status. Those are issues for local 4-H organizations.

The district shows are designed so that those cattle selected by judges as blue ribbon winners qualify for entry in the state junior dairy shows in September, in Harrisburg, held in conjunction with the Pennsylvania All American Dairy Show (PAADS).

State dairy youth have entered more than 1,000 animals for the state show each year, for the past several years.

At the district shows, those youth whose animals receive blue ribbons, no matter what the show placing, become eligible for the state competition.

In this way, the judge can select animals that are worthy of state-level competition, while not diminishing the district show placing.

At the same time youths' cattle are being judged, the showmanship displayed by the youth is also judged.

Those whose showmanship skills are judged favorably qualify for state showmanship award consideration.

While the deadline has passed or is soon approaching for more than half of the early district shows, there is still time to submit entry applications to five of the 12 district shows:

• The East Central 4-H/FFA Show is set for August 20 in Beaver Springs, and has an entry deadline of July 30. There is no entry fee. The show manager is Lester McWilliams, (570) 658-2419. Entries should be mailed to: Union County Extension, 103 South Second St., Lewisburg, PA 17837-1966.

National Junior Names Scrapbook Contest Winners

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — This year marked the beginning of a new competition at the National Holstein Convention, held this year in Boise, Idaho.

The National Junior Holstein Scrapbook Contest was held for the first time this year with 12 states competing. Entries are divided into two divisions based on the number of the members each state club has.

The large club division includes states with over 201 members while the small division in the clubs with between 1 and 200 members.

The scrapbooks give readers a view of the activities that the state does throughout the year. Each entry is judged based on organization and neatness as well as originality, creativity and the variety of activities portrayed. The panel of judges represented a cross-section of convention attendants.

Monetary prizes of $100, $50 and $25 were awarded to first, second, and third place in both the large and small divisions.

McCullough Scholarship Winners

COLUMBUS, Ohio — National Dairy Shrine (NDS) announces the two winners of the Marshall E. McCullough scholarships. They are in memory of the well-known Georgia nutrition research and educator, Marshall McCullough.

The scholarships are awarded to incoming college freshmen planning to major in dairy/animal science with a communications emphasis or in agriculture journalism with a dairy emphasis. One $2,500 scholarship will go to the winner and one $1,000 scholarship to the runner-up.

Natalie Borba

Natalie Borba, an outstanding FFA member from Escalon, California, was named the winner. Natalie just graduated from Central Catholic High School with a 3.5 grade point average and has been accepted at California Polytechnic State University this fall where she is to major in dairy science.

Natalie was recently selected as a Star State Farmer finalist and was a member of the Escalon FFA Dairy Cattle Judging Team. In 1998 she exhibited the grand champion Holstein at the Western National Junior Show. She has been very active in the management of FDB Holsteins and currently owns 56 head.

Scott A. Cropper

Scott Cropper of Georgetown, Ohio, was runner-up. Scott recently graduated from Eastern Brown Local High School with a 3.9 grade point average and honors including membership in the National Honor Society. Scott will start his college career at Ohio State University this fall majoring in dairy science and agriculture engineering.

Scott has been active in 4-H, FFA, and school and church activities. He has served as president, treasurer and health and recreation officer of his local 4-H club.

Both Natalie and Scott will be recognized at National Dairy Shrine's Awards Banquet at the World Dairy Exposition, Madison, Wisconsin on Sept. 30.

King Farm Hosts Adams Dairy Producers

JINNY WILT
Adams Co. Correspondent

YORK SPRINGS (Adams Co.) — The cows on the Jeff King farm near here are more content in their new surroundings these days and showing it by producing more milk.

King was host for the Adams County Dairy Producers' Summer Program on July 9, when area milk producers toured his new milking parlor and free stall barn.

The twilight meeting was a combined summer event for all Adams County dairy producers and organized by the Adams County Holstein Club, Adams County DHIA and the Adams County Penn State extension office.

Speaking of his recent improvements, King, who is the fourth generation to work the farm that is located just off Route 94, said, "Last year we decided to tear out the stalls and put in a stall barn. We hadn't made any updates in probably 25 years. Then I decided to put in a double-six parallel parlor simply for ease of milking, worker productivity and productivity per cow.

"And the free stall barn (was added) because the cows needed better facilities. They weren't comfortable, we weren't comfortable, the feeding system was outdated and worn out. It was going to cost me quite a few thousand dollars to change it and that's when we decided to go with a total ration mixer, a free stall barn and the parlor," he said.

King noted that he chose to put the parlor in the barn, a move that saved him as much as $70,000.

"I wanted to keep the debt down and that was one way I could to that. My goal was to put up a parlor and a free stall barn for $150,000 and I made it," he says, understandably pleased.

He explained that it now takes him about 55 minutes to milk 68 cows in his milking herd compared to 2½ hours. He raises all his young stock which brings his current herd to between 165 and 170 animals.

With the new mixer, he said, "We mix the grain, the minerals and the haylage and the hay all together, balance the ration and feed it to them in the three-row barn with a drive-through feed alley. It really makes it a lot easier." Production has increased by about five pounds per cow, he said.

And he'a happy that the somatic cell count is decreasing.

He's also pleased with the way the cows held up during the recent extreme heat, chuckling when he said that during past heat waves the cows wanted to stand under trees or in the creek to keep cool and didn't want to eat, but this time he even opened the barn, but they stayed put. "It wasn't cool anyplace, but it didn't take a rocket scientist to know that the barn was the coolest place to be," he said.

"With this barn they've tolerated it fairly good. Food consumption has gone down a little bit, I'd say about 10 percent. I lost about 10 percent in the milk on those days it was 100 plus, but compared to years before it was much less," he said.

Another improvement he is considering for the future is a sprinkler system over the feed alley.

He doesn't anticipate milking more than 120 cows on the 245-acre farm. In addition he rents another 100 acres and has the help of two employees.

Pennsylvania DHIA also brought an exhibit that showed off its computer programs and software.

Before Spraying, Scout For Potato Leafhopper In Alfalfa

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

REHRERSBURG (Berks Co.) — Potato leafhopper (PLH) is the most destructive pest to alfalfa, costing U.S. producers millions of dollars in lost crops and diminished nutrient value — and a problem which can be controlled.

Even more, producers with new alfalfa seedings should be looking carefully, closely, and often for the pest and learn how to treat it to ensure best returns, according to a Berks County crop agent.

In June, more than a dozen producers and agri-industry representatives toured the Samuel and Sandra Forry farm near Rehrersburg during an alfalfa field scouting workshop.

The Forrys — including sons Mike, 27; Matt, 16; Mark, 12; and daughter Mary, 14 — farm about 250 acres, including rented land, on their farm. Seventy acres are in alfalfa, cut mostly for haylage. Most are Doebler's variety with some Pioneer, according to Samuel.

Some fields are in their third year of production. This year there were two new seedlings of alfalfa, one drilled into oats, which were removed early this year.

The new alfalfa seedings are coming up through the oat stubble.

At the workshop, producers from around the region assembled the muslin nets and carefully marked the handles. Mena Hautau, Berks County agent, and Christine Williams, ag instructor at Tulpehocken High School, conducted the demonstrations.

"Dozens of young farmers ask me, every spring, should I spray?" said Williams. "Should I spray now? They have a new sprayer and they tell me they want to get out and use it."

Williams noted that they should spray if they can first identify the pests in the field, count them, and determine, with prepared formulas, if there are enough pests out there to economically warrant a spray.

Threshold levels and plants dictate that spraying is necessary only if the producer gets down of the truck and goes out to look, noted Williams.

"Sweep the fields with nets and determine if the level is there to spray," she said.

For potato leafhopper, the adults overwinter by traveling south. But they arrive on alfalfa fields usually during or after first cutting.

The evidence of their return: hopper burn, an inverted yellow "V" on the tip of the alfalfa leaves, noted Mena Hautau, Berks County agent.

"If the farmer says his crops are yellow, they already lost a lot of feed value," she said. "You don't want it to get that bad."

The adult PLH is a pale green, wedge-shaped, winged insect about 3 millimeters long. According to information presented by Hautau, the adult insect is broadest toward the head and tapers evenly to the wing tips.

In a dry year, the population of the bug can build rapidly, said Hautau, and produce phenomenal numbers. And during a dry year the plant is under stress.

"Pay attention to potato leafhopper in a dry year," she said. "If it is a new seeding, you should be looking. Take a look at the new seedings first, then the rest of the farm."

Some producers rely on scouting services. For those who don't, determining the growing degree days along with numbers of infestation work hand-in-hand in developing a proper spray program.

Some producers trust the new "glandular hair" (GH) resistant type alfalfa to ward off PLH. With the GH types, a hair-like follicle projects from the stem, keeping the bug from using a stylus to suck water and nutrients from the plant.

However, the GH varieties are best used with a combination of management, and the yields have been proven, so far, to be slightly less. Simply using GH varieties is no silver bullet — producers still need to spray. Many growers don't see real economic benefits unless PLH infestation is severe.

Because companies are releasing new varieties at almost a breakneck pace, growers need to know, more than ever before, what is out there, and additional university testing is critical.

During the demonstration, those at the field day took 20 sweeps, running in a U-formation, five times on the six-acre first-year alfalfa field, for a total of 100 sweeps. The five spots should not be located next to each other and not in the same line, moving the net softly yet swiftly through the alfalfa planting, but not touching the ground.

The Forrys — including, from left, Matt, Sam, Sandy, Mike, and Mark — farm about 250 acres, including rented land, on their farm. Seventy acres are in alfalfa, cut mostly for haylage.

"Pay attention to potato leafhopper in a dry year," said Mena Hautau, Berks agent, who conducts the sweep.

Before Spraying, Scout For Potato Leafhopper In Alfalfa

"Dozens of young farmers ask me, every spring, should I spray?" said Christine Williams. "Should I spray now? They have a new sprayer and they tell me they want to get out and use it."

When the sweeps are completed, scouts should grab the bottom of the netting, about 10 inches from the small end, to trap the insects in a small area. Then, little by little, slowly release the bag, counting as the leafhoppers — and other insects — leap out.

During the demonstrations, the average count of PLH was 2-3.

In the end, when other factors were considered (height of plant, growing degree days, and others), spraying, according to Williams, was necessary at the Forry farm.

Using degree days in combination with stage of growth will determine how the pest will be handled — and this directly correlates with potential feed value of the crop.

The demonstration was funded with a Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture integrated pest management (IPM) grant and funding from the Young Farmer program.

In the future, Hautau noted, degree day information, which is already becoming the standard for use of sprays in an IPM program, will be delivered by computer or fax to farmers individually. Already companies exist that can provide that information — already in use on major orchards in the state.

According to Penn State Circular 284, "A Pest Management Program for Alfalfa in Pennsylvania," alfalfa is the second most valuable crop to the economy of the state. Harvested on more than 840,000 acres, it was valued at approximately $240 million in 1981, according to the circular.

Stiles Family Distinguished Dairy Cattle Breeder

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The Robert Stiles Family of Clearbrook, Virginia, has been selected to receive the National Dairy Shrine's Distinguished Dairy Cattle Breeder Award for 1999.

Three brothers, Kenneth, Mike, and Paul Stiles and their families manage the all-registered Jersey herd at Waverly Farm.

The operation began as Walnut Farm in Montgomery County, Md. In 1967, because of Washington, D.C.'s urgan sprawl, Robert and Hazel Stiles decided to move their farm to the current Virginia location on Waverly Road.

Thus, Waverly Farm was born. After their parents passed away, the brothers took over the operation. Originally, there were five brothers. Blair passed away in 1989, and Tracy returned to Maryland in 1996 to start his own herd. Their sister, Deborah Callison, continues to support the farm.

At the All-American Jersey Show, the Robert Stiles family has won premier breeder award 14 times and the premier exhibitor award six times.

In addition, they have exhibited five grand champions, three junior grand champions, and three Jersey Jug Futurity winners at the show. The family won the American Jersey Cattle Association's Master Breeders Award in 1998 and the Virginia Distinguished Dairy Family Award in 1999.

Of the 271 cows in their 1998 classification, 99 scored Excellent, and 168 were Very Good. The herd has produced more than 200 cows with lifetime production over 100,000 pounds of milk and two cows over 200,000 lifetime.

WF Justin Lanita scored EX-96, produced 140,505 lifetime, and was National Grand Champion twice. Another prominent cow, WF Justin Bits, scored EX-95, produced 133,138 pounds, was a National Grand Champion, and was chosen as Hoard's Dairyman Jersey of the '90s.

To date, the Robert Stiles family also has helped breed more than 50 proven sires, and about 20 have entered active A.I. service. Furthermore, WF Generator Justin won premier sire at the All-American Dairy Show in addition to siring the two national grand champion cows mentioned above.

In 1982, Dr. Ray Murley and Dr. Joe Lineweaver of Virginia Tech started a partnership with Waverly Farm. From this came the prefix WF/L&M, which many of the breed's top bulls and cows possess. Among the sires are: WF/L&M Beretta Glass-ET (ranked third Net Merit in the May 1999 bull proofs) and WF/L&M Duncan Barber-ET.

The 265-cow herd is milked in a double-5 side-opening parlor with automatic take-offs. In 1998, the family had a rolling herd average of 16,252 M, 788 F, and 614 P. Waverly Farm also is known internationally, with cow, heifer, bull, and embryo sales customers in Canada, Brazil, Venezuela, South Africa, Mexico, Denmark, Ecuador, Columbia, and Argentina.

The Distinguished Dairy Cattle Breeder Award is bestowed annually by National Dairy Shrine to active, progressive breeders who, through expertise in managing a dairy breeding herd based upon sound genetic and business principles, serve as a model of success for contemporaries. It was first awarded in 1973. The Robert Stiles Family will be honored at the National Dairy Shrine's 50th Anniversary Awards Banquet on September 30 in conjunction with World Dairy Expo.

Iowa, Florida Top Dairy Bowl

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — The Iowa junior and Florida senior Dairy Bowl teams beat out tough competitors to win their respective divisions at the 1999 National Holstein Convention in Boise, Idaho. Thirty-five teams competed in this year's contest

Daniel Bolin, Lindsey Stewart, Jason Steinlage and Mandy Sparrgrove were the members of Iowa's winning team. This team was coached by Marilyn Steffens.

Iowa prevailed over Illinois' team which was Andrew Lenkaitis, Jacqueline Florent, Molly Florent and Lori Schultz, along with their coach, Lori Lyons.

Florida's team of Mary Thomas, Jody Salter, John Spann and Jennifer Clements took home the title in the senior division. They were coached by Mary Sowerby.

The Florida team defeated the team from New England. Team members were Kate Briggs, Seth Kimball, Karl Hartshorn, Kurt Nieminen and their coach, Brenda Mihaliak.

The eighth annual Sportsmanship Award is given to a team that displays good conduct and courtesy throughout the contest. This year's winner in the junior division was the Ohio team of Kelly Epperly, Tony Henry, Molly McGuire, Tim Lamb and coaches, Nick McGuire and Marcia Lamhers.

In the senior division, Texas came away with these honors. Team members included KR Averhoff, JR Fisher, Deidre Liggett, Lori Polk and coaches Paula Christian and Bobby McDonald.

The Dairy Bowl contest tests participants on their knowledge of the dairy industry, and related areas. The contest is divided into two divisions, a junior division for participants 16 years old and under, and a Senior division for those over 16.

QUESTION: When do we need to worry about heat stress with our milking herd? What would be some ideas about managing our cows through this period?

ANSWER: We are into times of concern already this year with the two most hot and humid months yet to come.

I would like to talk about the two "H's" — heat and humidity — and give some guidelines about when you need to worry.

I use 80 degrees as a guide to first be concerned about extra efforts to cool our cows.

At this temperature, th humidity needs to climb to about 70 percent for concern to mount. This combination equals 150, and I use it as the first indicator that the cows will respond to extra cooling measures.

When the temperature reaches 85, then the humidity will have greater effect, and I drop the combination guide to 135, which is at 50-percent humidity.

As 90 degrees approaches, the humidity above 30 percent will begin to be stressful on the cows.

At 95 degrees, any humidity above 10 percent will prove harmful.

Even higher temperatures need to be addressed, regardless of humidity.

80 degrees + 70% humidity = 150 points

85 degrees + 50% humidity = 135 points

90 degrees + 30% humidity = 120 points

95 degrees + 10% humidity = 105 points

Another way to think of cooling cows is to imagine that the environment around them is like a sponge that will absorb the heat away from them.

In this way, it is easier to see the relationship that exists between heat and humidity.

Some observations that tell us the level of heat stress that our cows are feeling are respiration rates, body temperatures, water intakes, dry matter intakes, and production.

Heat stress will cause respiration rates to increase above 80 breaths per minute, and body temperatures to rise above 102.5 degrees.

Dry matter feed intake may drop as much as 8 percent or more and milk production losses will follow at this rate, even if we did not pay attention to the drop in intake.

The most common mistake that dairymen make during heat stress is to make dietary changes in an effort to maintain nutrient intake while dry matter intakes go down.

Some altering of the diet may be helpful, but not if we sacrifice rumen health considerations. Butterfat percent that drops to levels abnormal for the breed is one early sign that rumen health has been compromised.

Avoid butterfat depression that sends butterfat percent below that of protein percent.

This represents serious danger. Dietary changes that avoid drastic ration density shifts are a much better alternative.

Maximizing dry matter intakes should be the emphasis and may be accomplished in several ways.

Forage quality must be a top priority!

Feed forage needs to be made properly and more importantly, stored properly. Poor fermentation and excessive heating will drop intakes at any time of the year, but will be worse in hot weather.

Some ideas to help your cows get through heat stress periods are:

- Increase the feeding frequency.
- Supply more feed at night when it is cooler.
- Disperse fresh feed during critical feeding periods (after milking).
- Clean out bunks more often to avoid heat and spoilage.
- Cover outside bunks with shade material to reduce feed heating.
- Push up feed often.
- Consult with your nutritionist before changing diet density.
- Add additional water sources near feeding areas.
- Add cooling fans to feed areas.

One last idea that is often overlooked is that clean cows will dissipate heat better than dirty ones. So, designate an area to shower the cows.

The holding area or return alleys from parlors can be equipped with showerheads that will clean cows as well as soak them down. The evaporation period that follows will cool cows effectively.

National Dairy Shrine Celebrates 50th Year Plans Annual Banquet

COLUMBUS, Ohio — National Dairy Shrine continues to commemorate its 50th year, holding a successful celebration at its visitors' center in June and making plans for an anniversary banquet at World Dairy Expo on Set. 30.

National Dairy Shrine was founded by a small group of visionary dairy leaders who held the first annual meeting at National Dairy Cattle Congress in Waterloo, Iowa on October 5, 1949.

Today, more than 16,000 members nationwide continue the founders' goals of preserving dairiy history, honoring dairyi leaders and encouraging dairy youth.

The celebration on June 12 brought more than 300 people from 22 states to Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin, where National Dairy Shrine operates its visitors' center.

This "Hall of Fame" of the industry includes dairy memorabilia, documents, tapes and photos of dairy leaders, past and present. Many of these leaders were on hand on June 12, including 25 of the 28 living past president of the organization.

The annual meeting is scheduled for Thursday, Sept. 30, at 4 p.m. in the Kegonsa Room of the Expo Center at World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wisconsin.

Banquet festivities will begin in the same building with a 5:30 p.m. reception in the atrium area. The dinner and program will be at 6:30 p.m. in the Mendota Rooms 5-8.

To make reservations for the banquet, contact Maurice Core at National Dairy Shrine, 1224 Alton Darby Creek Road, Columbus, OH 43228, or Phone, Fax, E-mail at the above.

Tickets are $20 for adults, with a reduced price of $17 for dairy judging team members.

Dairy Expansion Tour Announced

LANCASTER, YORK, LEBANON — A bus tour has been scheduled August 5 to visit three different dairy farms that have undergone successful improvements and expansions of their dairy facilities in recent years, each in a different manner.

The tour will be an opportunity for dairy producers to:

- See three examples of facility improvements and expansion.
- Hear about the experiences these producers had before, during and after their expansion projects — the planning that went into them, the decisions and adjustment that had to be made, and the surprises and rewards they faced.
- Hear experts explain the details of the various systems (feeding, manure, milking, water, etc.) on each farm.
- Hear presentations and participate in discussions on the bus while traveling from farm to farm.

Farms to be visited include the Hix family at Skyview Acres in Shartlesville. They have a 6-row, drive-thru freestall barn with rubber-filled mattresses in their 438 freestalls and automatic alley scrapers. Cows enjoy the comfort of a rubber-base floor at the fence-line feed bunk. The barn is naturally ventilated. Transition cows and problem cows benefit from their hospital and treatment facility. They have a split level, double 14 parallel parlor featuring a basement, a single exit lane from which cows can be sorted and a nice office and employee area. Excellent manure and water management programs.

Steve and Janine Strickland of Strick Farms in Elizabethtown has a simpler, but efficient freestall setup. He built a 3-row open-front barn with fence-line feeding and 136 stalls that are bedded with sand. Alleys are tractor-scraped. He has a double 4 auto flow parlor.

When Scott and Karen Nolt, Country Path Holsteins in Lebanon, decided to expand, they decided to stick with a well-designed, labor-efficient 100-cow tiestall barn that features looped stalls, rubber-filled mattresses, gravity manure and water systems, tunnel ventilation for summer plus another system for year-round ventilation.

The tour will be by motorcoach, and the bus departs 7:15 a.m. from the Lancaster Farm and Home Center and 8 a.m. from the Lebanon Expo Center. Return time will be approximately 6:15 p.m. and 5:30 p.m. respectively. A $30 registration fee covers bus transportation and lunch. Reservations may be made by calling the York County Cooperative Extension office at 717-840-7408 by July 30.

This event is sponsored by Penn State Cooperative and local agribusinesses.

The American Guernsey Association

Guernsey Youth Awarded For Accomplishments

REYNOLDSBURG, OHIO — Playing an active role in the advancement of the Guernsey breed, using hands-on experience to learn more about the breed and leadership skills are the decisive factors in the National Outstanding Guernsey Youth competition. Young dairy enthusiasts from around the nation competed for this distinction at the 1999 National Guernsey Convention in Dublin, Ohio, on June 25, 1999.

Victoria Ansell of Scottdale, Pennsylvania, took home the title of the 1999 National Outstanding Guernsey Youth. She is the daughter of Larry and Susan Ansell and attends the Pennsylvania State University, where she is majoring in dairy and animal science. Victoria said that being a member of the Pennsylvania Junior Guernsey Breeders' Association is like being a member of a large family. "Everyone looks out for you and cares for you. Several people have reached out to me through Guernseys and have helped me to understand that there is more to dairying than just work. It is a love for the Guernsey cow and what she represents," Ansell said. Victoria is an active member in 4-H and Pennsylvania Junior Guernsey Breeders' Association. She has received numerous awards in each. Victoria received the $500 Lawrence Colebank Award and a lifetime membership to the American Guernsey Association for her accomplishments.

Nichole Tyrrell, first runner-up in the National Guernsey Outstanding Youth Contest, is a student at the University of Minnesota, St. Paul, and is the daughter of Dennis and Cheryl Tyrrell. They live on the family farm, Oak Crest Farm, in Browerville, Minnesota. On their farm operation, Nichole is responsible for tasks such as giving shots, milking and taking care of fresh cows. She has been involved in 4-H and FFA, in which she was awarded the State Farmer distinction. She has served as president of the Minnesota Junior Guernsey Breeders' Association. Nichole received $50 to assist with her travel to the national convention.

Holcomb Honored For Distinguished Service

REYNOLDSBURG, OHIO — The American Guernsey Association honored Robert Holcomb of Greene, New York, for his distinguished service to the Guernsey breed at the 1999 National Guernsey Convention in Dublin, Ohio, on June 26.

Holcomb has held many positions affiliated with Guernseys. These positions include Director of District 1 on the American Guernsey Association Board of Directors from 1986-1994 and president of the New York State Guernsey Breeders Cooperative, Inc.

He is also an important part of his community. He is a member of the First United Methodist Church and was a 4-H and FFA member. He also served as president of his local 4-H club and president of Broome County 4-H Club Council for two years.

Holcomb has been premier breeder and exhibitor numerous times at shows as prestigious as New York State Fair, Eastern States Exposition and the National Guernsey Show in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. He has also shown junior, senior and grand champions at these shows. All of these accomplishments have resulted in numerous All-American honors.

Robert is known in the New York and New England area for his knowledge of Guernseys and his willingness to help promote the breed. He is a strong supporter of Guernsey youth, and new breeders can always count on his support and advice.

Guernsey Board Takes Action

REYNOLDSBURG, OHIO — The American Guernsey Association Board of Directors held their annual meeting at the association's national convention in Dublin, Ohio, June 23-26. The board, lead by president John Morrow of Tyrone, Pennsylvania, made many positive actions for the upcoming year.

The following movements were taken by the board at this meeting:

Approved 1998 financials, showing a net profit for the American Guernsey Association and Purebred Publishing, Inc. of $22,960.

All breeders will be required to provide a color photograph in order to register Guernsey Type (GT) animals.

Winherd, a windows based herdbook software program, will be purchased to replace the old registration software which was not Y2K compliant.

8-year-old junior members will now be eligible to show in national junior shows where show managements allow.

Record-Breaking Sale At National Guernsey Convention

REYNOLDSBURG, OHIO — High temperatures did not distract the large group of Guernsey breeders on hand to bid on some of the best Guernsey cattle in the nation at the National Convention Sale in Mechanicsburg, Ohio. The crowd gathered at Land of Living Farm on June 26, 1999, to witness 56 lots sell with an average of $3,192.

"Top-notch consignments, excellent cattle-preparation and facilities, and a growing demand for registered Guernseys all contributed to the highest national sale average in breed history," said Seth Johnson, executive secretary of the American Guernsey Association.

Topping the sale for females at $8,500 was Land of Living J Gracious-ET, purchased by John Ayars of Mechanicsburg, Ohio and Dr. Kenny Joe Manion of Scottsville, Kentucky. Sired by Land of Living V Joey-ET, "Gracious" is Excellent-90 with records of 18,770M 5.0% 931F 3.6% 673P at 2-03 in 365 days. She is the daughter of Wincrest Vayette Grace, EX-95, a world class leader for milk production in 365 days with a record at 4-01 of 41,420M 4.7% 1,961F 3.2% 1,305P. "Gracious" was consigned by Land of Living Farms of Mechanicsburg, Ohio.

Maplehurst Keane's Joy, purchased for $8,000 by Friendship Farms, Millbrook, New York, was the second high-selling female of the sale. "Joy" is sired by Land of Living V Keane-ET and is the daughter of Maplehurst BJ Joyce-ET. Her grandam is Laeschland Mercury Bridget, VG-86, who made over 21,000M at 3-11. The next dam is the well-known Laeschland TS Biddy, EX-94. She was consigned by Ken Forster of Lynden, Ontario, Canada.

The high-selling Guernsey Gold heifer was Yellow Creek Lord Terri, a Trotacre Mercury Lord-ET daughter with a PA of +1,375M +63F +50P +$205CY. "Terri" was consigned by Truman Weaver and Steven Cochard of Goshen, Indiana. She was purchased by R. Tony Fulton of Los Alamos, California, for $2,600. The Guernsey Gold Heifer Program is a small sale of select open heifers available for bidding by junior members between the ages of six and 19. Fifteen percent of the gross proceeds from the sale of these heifers goes into a pot and is divided into four awards for a production contest. The production contest ranking is based on the animal's 2-year-old mature equivalent pounds of protein.

Highlighting the event was the sale of the Four Winds Dynasty bull syndicate to syndicate members and Semex Alliance for $14,750. Seventy shares were sold at $200 each. "Dynasty" is sired by Four Winds Magicman-ET and is out of the EX-90 1998 Unanimous All American Sr. 2-year-old who made over 20,000M at 2-05. The grandam is the world renown Westlynn Tom Dee, EX-96, who was grand champion at World Dairy Expo four consecutive years. "Dee" has gained respect in production circles as well, making over 26,000M at 5-11. "Dynasty" was consigned by Clark and Joy Vilter of Hartland, Wisconsin.

The sale was managed by Guernsey Marketing Service and the Ohio Guernsey Breeders' Association.

The American Guernsey Association is the national organization for the registration and promotion of Guernsey cattle and is headquartered in Reynoldsburg, Ohio.

Weaver Named 1999 Master Breeder

REYNOLDSBURG, OHIO — Truman Weaver of Goshen, Indiana, was chosen to receive the 1999 American Guernsey Association's Master Breeder Award at the National Guernsey Convention in Dublin, Ohio, on June 26.

Weaver is the fourth generation to own and operate Yellow Creek Farm. In 1931, his father, Oscar, started breeding registered Guernseys. In 1959, Truman started a partnership with his father and took over sole ownership in 1977. Today, Yellow Creek Farm is still going strong, milking 76 cows. The herd had the highest herd average in Indiana in 1997.

Truman is currently a member of DHIA, Indiana Guernsey Breeders' Association, American Guernsey Association, Elkhart County Farm Bureau and Lake Central Young Sires program. In June 1996, he represented the United States at the World Dairy Conference in England.

Yellow Creek Farm's achievements since 1977 include: 58 National Production Leaders, 14 Gold Star Cows and 53 cows classified as Excellent. His herd has been appraised 45 times, more than any other Guernsey herd.

Truman, along with his wife Elnora, encourage others to pursue involvement with the Guernsey breed. Jerry Emerich, a dairy program specialist with Select Sires said, "As a college student with an interest in Guernseys, the Weavers gave me an opportunity to work with their herd and learn the purebred cattle business. My involvement with them remains to this day."

Elects New Directors

REYNOLDSBURG, OHIO — The ballots for two seats on the American Guernsey Association's Board of Directors were tallied at the associationís 1999 national convention in Dublin, Ohio. The following names were announced at the annual meeting held on June 26, 1999.

Gene Cross of Sherburn, Minnesota, was elected to represent District Five. Gene and his wife, Ione, own Cross Lea Guernseys. Gene has served as president of the Martin County American Dairy Association, president of the Southwest Minnesota Guernsey Breeders' Association, president of the Minnesota Guernsey Breeders' Association and has served on their board of directors for 12 years. As a member of the American Guernsey Association, he has served on nominating committees, election committees and resolution committees. Gene feels that the number one priority of an organization should be to keep a balanced budget. "We must all work together to promote our breed, her high-quality milk, her great feed efficiency and her docile nature that allows her to compete with any other breed for the all-important bottom line," Gene stated. He believes that his past leadership roles and committee experience will be an asset that he can bring to the American Guernsey Association's Board of Directors.

Dr. John O. Mozier of Stanley, Kansas, was re-elected to serve on the board of directors as a director-at-large. John and his wife, Mary Lou, own approximately 50 Guernseys. Registered Guernseys have been owned by the Mozier family since 1948. Prior to his retirement, Mozier worked for the Animal Health Research and Development Department of Chemagro Corporation, a predecessor company of Bayer. He is a member of the American Guernsey Association, the Missouri and Kansas Guernsey Breeders' Association and the American Veterinary Medical Association. He is also an active member of the Golden Guernsey Committee and is very involved in coordinating the research on Guernsey milk. John believes that his management experience will serve him well as a member of the board of directors.

Ripley Brothers Honored As Outstanding

REYNOLDSBURG, OHIO— Outstanding young Guernsey farmers were honored at the 1999 National Guernsey Convention in Dublin, Ohio, during the annual meeting on June 26, 1999.

Thomas and Daniel Ripley of Cortland, New York, were named the 1999 Outstanding Young Guernsey Farmers. Daniel, his wife Shari and son Daniel Elijah, as well as Thomas, his wife Crystle, and their four children; Seth, Kyle, Esther and Evelyn manage the day-to-day operations of Ripley Farm.

The brothers started dairy farming as calf feeders at the ages of four and five. They said that these responsibilities at such a young age taught them to love Guernseys. As a reward for their hard work, the boys were given a calf or two per year.

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — The 43rd annual Lebanon Area Fair is set to be held July 24-31 at the Lebanon Fairgrounds and the agriculturally emphasized youth and family event has announced a full week of activities.

The Lebanon Area Fair is a volunteer effort to benefit the county 4-H and FFA programs.

Parking is free every day, and admission is $2 per person aged 12 years and older. Free admission days are Sunday, July 25, and Saturday July 31.

Senior citizens are admitted free on Wednesday, July 28.

To continue the tradition of the Lebanon Area Fair, fair organizers and staff have been busy for months making preparations, and exhibitors have been planning and preparing their entries in the various youth project, home, garden, livestock and breeding animal competitions.

Each and every day has been scheduled to offer a full agenda of activities and entertainment, and each day also has its own special highlights, guaranteeing that there each day is fun and different at the Lebanon Area Fair.

Officially, the Lebanon Area Fair this year is a Coca-Cola sponsored event.

Two schedules are presented. One for agricultural shows, competitions and events, and one for entertainment.

Not included in the schedule are the Owsley Petting Zoo and pony rides, both to be open all week.

There are additional charges for attending special events on the fairgrounds track. For those interested in attending all the track events, a weekly event pass is available for $30 if purchased prior to 6 p.m., July 24.

Lebanon Area Fair Set For July 24-31

The Lebanon Area Fairgrounds and Expo Center is located in North Cornwall Township, 2 miles south of the city of Lebanon, a Cornwall and Rocherty roads. Follow signs from Route 72.

For more information, call the fair office at (717) 273-3795.

July 24

For the public, the fair schedule starts 9 a.m., Saturday, July 24, with a Volksmarch, a 5-kilometer run, and a 4-H horse show; followed at 10 a.m. with judging of rabbit and cavy entries, and at 1 p.m., judging of poultry entries.

The Main Exhibit Hall — where all the indoor competitions are held, such as gardening, sewing, cooking, and types of youth projects — is set to open at 4 p.m.

At 5 p.m., July 24, the annual Lebanon Area Fair Queen contest is set to start in the Pavilion. Immediately following the crowning of the new Lebanon Fair queen is a cake auction.

Entertainment on July 24 starts at noon with Huffy the Clown; followed by a kids' pedal tractor pull contest at 2:30 p.m.; a comedy juggling and acrobatics show by Bounce and Ooh La La with Daniel starting at 3:15 p.m.; and a motorcycle stunt show at 4 p.m.. (These start times are for first performances. Each entertainment group is to perform several shows during the day and, in some cases, during the week. See the Entertainment & Activities Schedule)

In addition, July 24 offers a full evening of activity and choices starting at 7 p.m.

There's country line dancing from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., in the North Hall; karoake starting at 7 p.m. in the Pavilion; a 4x4 truck pull, and a modified farm tractor pull at 7 p.m. at the fairgrounds track (requires an additional entry fee); and a Zoo American presentation in the Center Hall at the same time.

July 25

One of the two free fair admission days, on Sunday, July 25, the Main Exhibition Hall opens at 9 a.m., and a second volksmarch kicks off.

At 10 a.m., there is a 4-H horse production show, which is different than the July 24 4-H horse show.

The rest of the day is filled with judging of rabbits and cavys, most of the same multiple show entertainers from Saturday are scheduled to perform, and they are to be joined by the Washington Band in the Pavilion at 2 p.m., and a male vocalist at 3 p.m.

July 26

On Monday, July 26, the swine show starts at 8:30 a.m. in the Swine Building; a dairy youth showmanship and clip-out contest is set for 9 a.m.; a blue ribbon apple contest is schedule for 1 p.m., a Hershey Cake and Cookie Contest is slated for 1 p.m., and a 4-H youth presentation contest is set for 2 p.m.

In the evening, the youth breeding sheep show kicks off at 6 p.m.

Some of the entertainment highlights for the day include Dave Martin's Bullmania — a popular rodeo show — set to be held in the Center Hall at 7:30 p.m. Also joining the entertainment lineup is to be the Dazzling Mills Family, with shows through Thursday.

July 27

On Tuesday, July 27, the colored dairy cattle breed shows are set to begin at 8:30 a.m. in the Center Hall, with the youth Holstein show to start at 9 a.m.

At 2:30 p.m., the beef show is set to start.

At 6:30 p.m. the youth meat goat show is scheduled. This is a change from the published fair premium book schedule.

At 7:30 p.m., the selection of the supreme champion dairy animal of the youth shows is set to start, followed by selection of the best bred and owned dairy animal.

A sheep to shawl demonstration is also scheduled for 6 p.m., while a lawn and garden tractor pull contest is set for the same time.

July 28

Wednesday, July 28, starts at 9 a.m. with a youth tractor driving contest, followed at 1 p.m. with the youth Beef Blocking Contest. The sheep blocking contest is set for 6 p.m., followed by 6:30 p.m., and the youth rabbit showmanship and fitting competition.

A favorite with the fair crowd is a superstock truck and tractor pull at 7:30 p.m. (with an additional entry fee).

July 29

Thursday, July 29, is Farmer's Night with special activities set for the 7:30 p.m., but the day gets started with the youth dairy judging contest starts at 10 a.m.. After the Farmer's Night event, a youth market lamb show is set to start at 8:45 p.m.

The rest of the day is filled with activities and entertainment

July 29 is also Chicken Barbecue Dinner day, a feature unique to the Lebanon Area Fair. With take out meals, the food is offered from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m.

July 30

On Friday, July 30, the open division Holstein show starts at 9 a.m., traditionally one of the largest county fair Holstein shows in the state.

Also on July 30, a youth livestock judging contest is set to be held at 9:30 a.m.

The evening is the close of the agricultural exhibits and contest portion of the Lebanon Area Fair, and the annual highlight is the sale of livestock champions, set to start at 6 p.m. in the Centre Hall. This event also allows for the recognition of youth who exhibited livestock, as well as those who purchase the animals.

In addition to musical and circus thrill shows, also set for July 30 is a tough trucks competition (additional entry fee). At 8:30 p.m., the Main Exhibition Hall is close to the public, and the agricultural exhibitors close down and cleanup for the year.

However, there are still activities for families and individuals on July 31. While fairgrounds cleanup is to start at 9:30 a.m., with all help welcomed, rides and food concessions open at noon, and a demolition derby starts at 7 p.m., followed by a fireworks show.

From the left, 1998 Lebanon Area Fair Queen Rebecca Shirk stands with buyers of the reserve grand champion market hog and exhibitor Billie Jo Atkins.

National Dairy Shrine Recognizes Progressive Dairy Producer

COLUMBUS, Ohio — In 1999 National Dairy Shrine established a new recognition program for outstanding young producers between the ages of 21 and 45 years.

The board of directors felt that producers of this age range are the potential leaders of tomorrow's dairy industry and their current outstanding achievements need to be recognized.

Each applicant was asked to present information about their operation that related to personal information; community activities; dairy heard statistics; herd management; management practices and goals; breeding program; and financial management.

The three 1999 winners will be recognized at the National Dairy Shrine Awards Banquet on September 30 at the World Dairy Expo and each will receive a $2,000 educational travel award.

Mark Rodgers, 35 of West Glover, Vt., is award winner for herds of 100 cows or less, milking 86 Holsteins with a rolling herd average of 29,277 lbs. milk, 960 lbs. protein; and 1129 lbs. fat on 2X. This has been a profitable operation for him and his partner. Mark has a 50 percent non-family partnership arrangement.

Mark's career started with active 4-H dairy activities and continued with a bachelor's degree from University of Vermont in 1984. He worked in the dairy industry for a few years with the American Jersey Cattle Association and Purina Mills Company before returning to Vermont.

Being involved in his community and agriculture related activities are important to Mark. "I enjoy promoting agriculture and the dairy business and feel it is our responsibility to convey our needs and concerns to the public while portraying the symbol of integrity and dedication that has defined the image of farmers for years."

He is currently involved in a volunteer program — Citizens Network for Foreign Affairs.

Incorporating the management practice of well-balanced rations, use of Total Mixed Rations feeding and Posilac as a management aid have increased the profitability of Andersonville Farms.

Jay and Laura Phipps-Douthit, both 31, of Kennedyville, Md. are sole shareholders of Centerdel Farm, Inc. and Phipps Farm I L.P. They are 1999 Progressive Dairy Producer winners for herd sizes of 101-500 cows. They milk 140 Holsteins in a double eight parallel parlor with rolling herd average of 33,810 lbs. milk, 3.12% protein, 3.84% fat on 3X.

Jay and Laura met while attending Virginia Tech, and were married after graduation. Both have been very active in county and state Farm Bureau, Young Farmers' activities, Maryland Holstein Association youth activities, and county and state fairs.

Production has increased dramatically in the past 3 to 5 years with the combination of management practices – use of Prosilac, milking 3X, separating cows based on age, feeding of one TMR ration, and 100% AI breeding. Pounds of milk per worker per year increased to the current level of 1,550,387 pounds.

The Douthit's do not crop work on their farm. They rely on custom operators for planting, harvesting, and manure spreading. This allows them the time to do what they do best, concentrating on their cows.

Jay and Laura are proud to be a family farm that has pride in their cows and farm. "We care about the next generation and the long term sustainability of our farm and agriculture in general. Efficiency is the cornerstone of the future of the dairy industry and technology is the key to improved efficiency."

The Progressive Dairy Producer award for herds of 500 cows and more goes to the corporation farm owned by Sherry L. Siemers-Peterman, (36); Dave S. Siemers (35); Daniel D. Siemers, (29), and Paul F. Siemers, (27), from Newton, Wisconsin.

All are children of Walter and Marlene Siemers and want to continue the 6th generation growing up on the family farm. The Siemers have been actively involved in 4-H, FFA, and Jr. Holstein activities while growing up.

With a well-thought out mission statement and business plan, the Siemers knew what the future goals of their business were.

In 1993 with 321 milking cows, they averaged 25,489 lbs. milk in an old, dark and poorly ventilated free stall barn. In the late summer of 1995 they moved into their new facilities and have increased in cow numbers to 1,500 with 2,400 acres and a current production of 28,591 lbs. milk, 891 lbs. protein, 1021 lbs. fat.

With an increase in hired labor the training of personnel has been a challenging priority. The use of Posilac, higher quality feed, and following a strict vaccination program have assisted in the production increases.

The Siemers have a very positive outlook about the future of the dairy business. They will continue to evaluate and adapt new technologies as they are made available. By doing this and continuing to work on personnel management skills, they want to continually improve themselves, their employees, and their business.

The 1700's farmhouse on the property of The Olde Stone Guesthouse is where breakfast is served to guests. Notice the bottom entrance, where additional guests rooms are available.

The Olde Stone Guesthouse Blooms A Welcome

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

ATGLEN (Chester Co.) — Profuse blooms of perennials and annuals burst from every crevice of Florence Stoltzfus's massive rock garden.

The tangle of brilliant color interspersed with winding paths serves as a refreshing haven for visitors at The Olde Stone Guesthouse.

A stone garden bench and seating on the spacious wooden deck allows guests to pause and breathe in the fragrance of Sweet Williams and freshly mowed hay, hear the croak of the resident bullfrog, the twitter of birds as they splash in the water bath, and the distant drone of tractors farming the land that surrounds the farm, or to admire the goldfish in the two fish ponds created among the terraced flower beds.

Florence, a gracious hostess, said that her childhood influenced her to open a bed and breakfast on the family farm.

"My dad always enjoyed meeting strangers. I have fond memories of big, wonderful meals with lots of company during my childhood," she said.

She also had lots of training in cooking from her mother who exceled in baking yeast breads and homemade doughnuts.

For years, Florence and husband John farmed the 200-acre farm that they purchased from John's grandfather in 1976, who had acquired several adjoining farms in the beginning of the century. The couple lived on the adjacent dairy farm during their seven children's growing up years and rented the house to family members. The buildings are used to house 12,000 turkeys. When Florence's husband passed away about six years ago, she switched homes with her son and family, who took over the dairy operation.

"I started daydreaming," Florence said of the decision to use the handsome stone farmhouse and springhouse and to find something fulfilling to do with her time.

A new kitchen and family room combo was built onto the stone structure. The fieldstone house built in the late 1700s has wide floorboards, a built-in corner cupboard, high ceilings, and exposed beams.

At first, Florence had wanted to serve dinners to groups in the main house's two dining rooms, but local zoning interfered with that idea.

The springhouse on the property appealed to Florence's creativity. Built in the 1700s of fieldstone, the property was in need of upkeep so the family decided to restore it.

The springhouse is now a delightful guesthouse complete with sitting room, bedroom, and bath.

Through word-of-mouth advertising and the Chester County Tourist Bureau, the Olde Stone Guesthouse became so popular that more rooms were needed, and the daylight basement of the main house was remodeled for overnight guests.

Florence offers a full home-cooked breakfast with many of her self-invented recipes such as Breakfast Pie, made with raw grated potatoes to form a crust and layered with sauteed peppers, onions, scrambled eggs, ham, sausage or bacon and topped with cheese.

Florence is an exception to the old adage: Never trust a thin cook.

"She's thin because she runs around real fast all the time," said her daughter Cindy Beiler, who lives nearby. Cindy often helps out with guests.

Opening her home to guests developed a dormant talent within Florence. She discovered she loved decorating and thinking up creative uses for family heirlooms and garage sale finds.

Although Florence modestly downplays her talent to combine Victorian and country decor, her daughter is quick to affirm that her mother is indeed responsible for the tastefully decorated home and guesthouse.

Florence tends to prefer Victorian touches and is sometimes stymied by her daughter's insistence to display primitive accessories.

"Why do you insist on having that old bench in here?" Florence complained to her daughter about the weatherd bench found on the property. But when placed at one end of the large dining room with a collection of old crocks, antique wooden toys, a primitive church replica, and a basket of dried flowers, Florence had to admit that it created an aura of appeal.

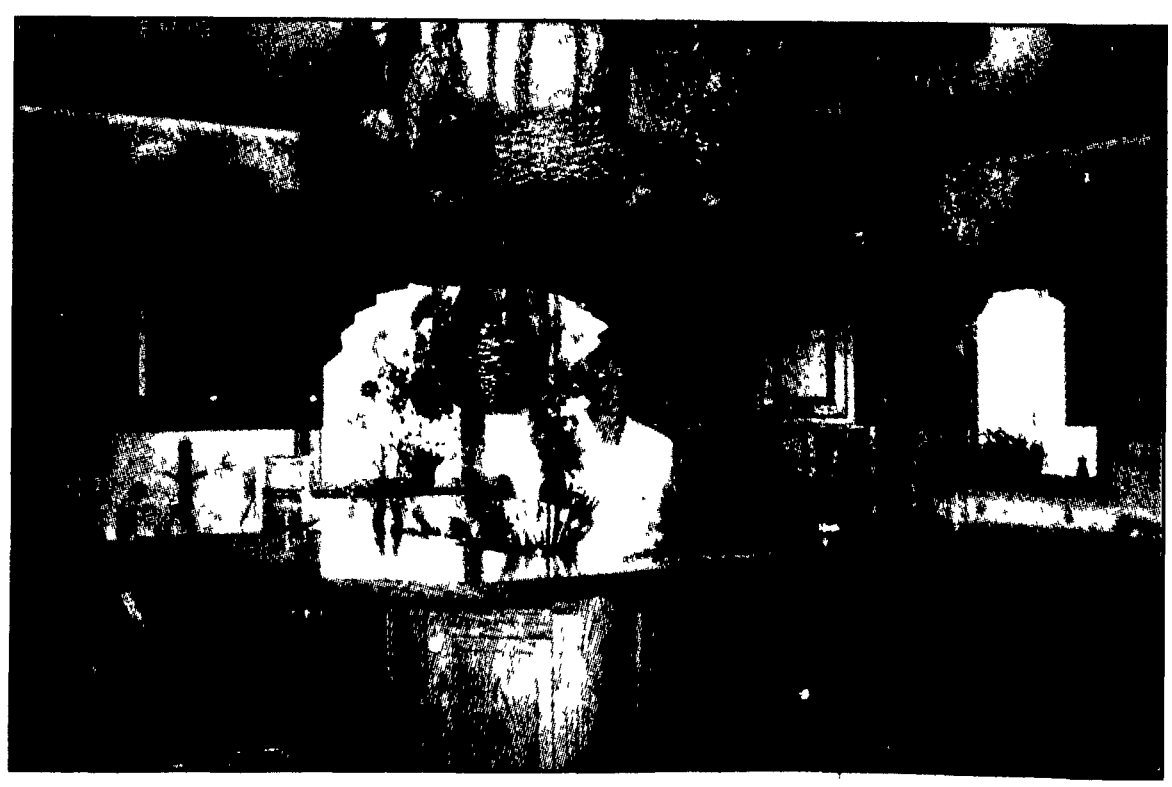
A dry sink stored in the cellar and other pieces now are cherished furnishings.

"Mom saves and saves, and now

(Turn to Page B3)

Florence Stoltzfus and daughter Cindy Beiler relax in the rock garden that borders the springhouse now known as The Olde Stone Guesthouse.

The former springhouse maintains its historical aura while offering the conveniences of air-conditioning and up-to-date bathroom.



The kitchen and family room were added on to the old stone structure before the family decided to operate a bed and breakfast.

she is glad she did," Cindy said.

Florence found the original brass dining room hanging lamp in the basement that was restored to its original glory for its prominent place above the dining room table.

Fascinated by the new life given to old pieces, Florence has found a new hobby of "yard saling" and using other people's castaways. These include such items as an old window frame turned into a mirror, old wooden crates stacked with books, a keyhole desk that holds a collection of her late husband's tools and childhood momentoes, and a grapevine intertwined with miniature lights that winds across the ceiling of one of the guestrooms.

The bedroom in the Olde Stone Guesthouse is a delightful retreat for many newlyweds or couples looking for a getaway.

Florences also uses the talents of extended family members. A son-in-law who is a stone mason created an impressive brick front entrance.

Florence blushes when Cindy reports that when her mother gets an idea, it doesn't matter how busy she is, she must do it "now."

That's how the second fishpond was dug out a week before one of the children held a wedding in the flower garden.

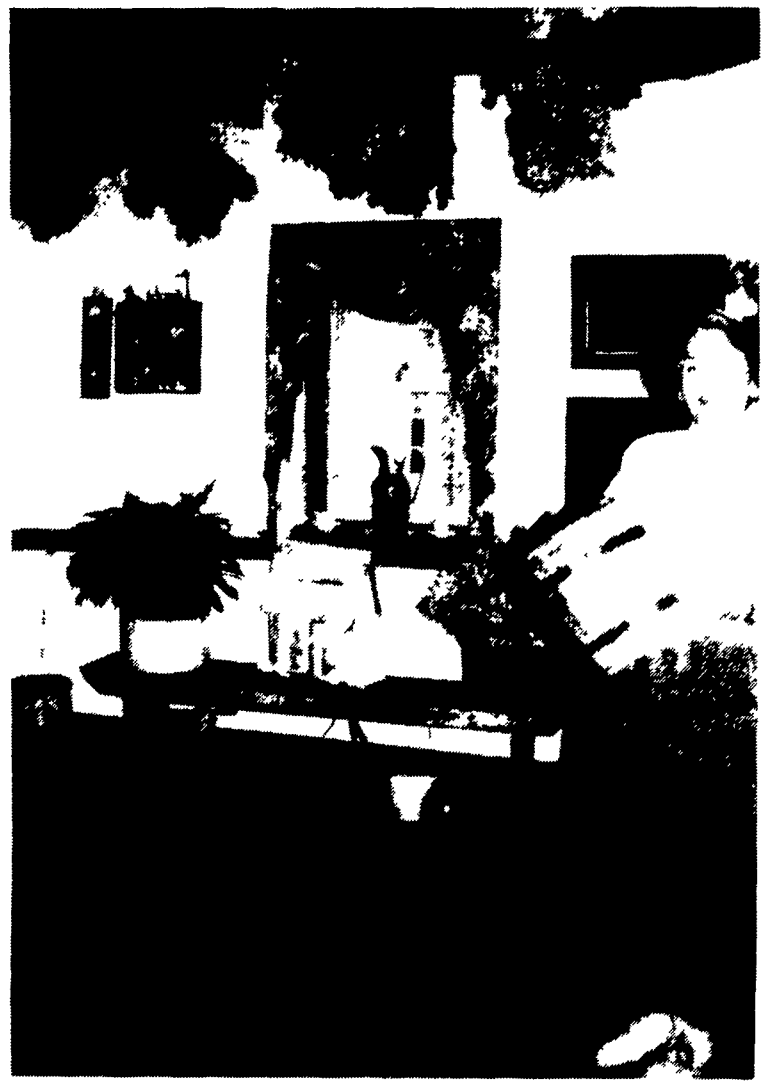
The son-in-law-to-be is reported to have said that when digging out the pond, he felt like Jacob, the biblical character who needed to labor many years for his father-in-law in order to attain his daughter as a wife.

A large piece of driftwood and stones gathered from travels are placed in strategic spots in the flower bed that covers almost half-an acre.

Several of Florence's 24 grandchildren help with cleaning the flower beds. An annual event is held one day every spring, when all her children and their families come to clear out the flower beds, pick up sticks, and edge and mulch. On one weekend every summer, the family gathers again and sets up tents and campers on the farm for family fun.

Bed and breakfasts throughout the county exude an individual appeal. The Olde Stone Guesthouse is an outstanding site for those who love flowers, nature, and beautifully restored old homes.

The Olde Stone Guesthouse is located two miles west of Rt. 10 and three miles east of Rt. 41, ½ mile south of U.S. 30 on Swan Road, Atglen. Call (610) 593-5572.



Florence tastefully combines Victorian and country decor in the farmhouse with its tall ceilings, wide-planked wooden floors, and deep windowsills. Here she holds a wooden measure, one of the many antiques salvaged from the basement and now displayed in the house.

Water.

Is there anything we take more for granted?

Anything we more waste? Anything we more abuse?

Turn on a kitchen spigot. And it's there. Step up to a drinking fountain. And it's there. Adjust a knob on the washing machine. And it's there.

Most of the time, we simply give having instant, fresh, potable water no thought whatsoever.

Until...it isn't there.

Until the pump breaks. Or the electricity goes off. Or, if on public water, the water main breaks.

Or, until lack of rain causes us to think about where water normally is. And, there are a lot of places water isn't, right now.

There is an increasing number of streambeds where it isn't. Increasing underground wells and springs where it isn't. And, shortly, if the weather pattern doesn't shift very soon, a lot of artificial watering systems, dusty cars, and dried up lawns where it won't be.

Even with mankind's vulnerability to the whims of rainfall, no one has yet figured out how, economically and dependably, to alter the weather. Not that it hasn't been tried over the years, but with mixed reports of success. Legendary are the tales of attempts to disperse possible hail-producing storms and of the weather-science pilots who flirt with death flying into the eyes of hurricanes.

Rain plays such a critical part in our local agriculture industry that we farmers sometimes forget not everyone lives as most of us do, with one eye on the sky for weather changes. Without the irrigation systems, which are commonplace in many areas of crop cultivation, the heavens are our sole source of production moisture.

It's surprising that our television doesn't automatically default to the Weather Channel, since we follow it so closely. Especially this time of year, when our winter feed supply–and grain sales to help cover the extensive costs of plantings of corn, alfalfa and soybeans – is made or ruined by the volume, or lack, of droplets falling from the heavens.

Long before the general public begins to get uneasy about water levels, you hear the subject edge into farmers' conversations.

Overhead in March: "There's not a lot of moisture in the ground for spring."

Overheard in April: "Pretty dry for this time of year, isn't it?"

Overheard in May: "We need some rain to get the liquid nitrogen down into the ground."

Overheard in June: "The weed control in the corn isn't going to do the job, if it doesn't rain."

Overheard in July: "Not much use we plant late soybeans. No moisture in the ground."

It has long been The Farmer's philosophy that, at least sometime over the annual spring-summer growing season, there will be a dry spell. Some years, they last a lot longer, and come at a more disadvantageous period of crop development. This current "dry spell" goes back at least a year for us, after a stretch of wet weather last spring put planting behind, then a desert-like August dried up the crops almost overnight. We won't even talk about the lack of snowfall.

Moisture that has come lately has been very spotty. For areas that get the local rains, it's something of the equivalent of hitting the agriculture lottery, albeit temporary. Even an inch can offer respite from disaster for a few days and dangle hopes out for more prolonged periods of moisture to help restore the region's seriously depleted groundwater supplies.

All our lamentations about lack of rain always bring to mind a long-time personal favorite anecdote, of a little girl questioned why she was carrying her umbrella to church on a hot, sunny, summer day.

"Well, aren't we coming to pray for rain?" was her reply.

Let's take care to not waste our precious and dwindling water.

And, get out the umbrellas. Please.

New Jersey Farmstead Opens

LAMBERTVILLE, N.J. — The Holcombe Jimison Farmstead Museum is open from now through Oct. 31. The museum preserves Hunterdon County's agricultural heritage of the 18th through 20th centuries.

The museum is housed in a restored three-story bank barn that was built into the hillside to make both floors accessible from ground level. The day to day life of the county's farmers and their families is presented in the exhibits of authentic tools and equipment.

Special events are planned for the second Saturday of each month.

For more information, call (908) 782-6653.

Admission is $3 for adults; $1 for students; and free for children five and under.

Daughter Carries On Mother's Legacy At Beaver-Lawrence Pageant

NEW CASTLE (Beaver Co.) — Twenty-five years later, Amy Liggett is following in the footsteps of her mother. Amy is the new Beaver-Lawrence dairy princess crowned on the same stage as her mother had been, Beaver Valley Mall. As a dairy maid, Amy's sister Holly will also help with dairy promotion and Lori Harman is the alternate dairy princess.

Amy, daughter of David and Debra Liggett of Bessemer, is a junior at Mohawk Area Jr.-Sr. High School.

On the family farm, Amy helps feed the calves. Activities include baby sitting, varsity cheerleading, church youth group member, Southwest 4-H Dairy Club president, County Ecology Club, Ski Club, and voice lessons.

Amy also participates with the Fame Conservatory. She plans to attend Youngstown State University to major in opera. Her hobbies include singing, running, and showing Guernseys, and being with friends.

Alternate Dairy Princess Lori is the daughter of Gary and Diane Harman of New Castle. Lori is also a junior at the same high school as Amy. In addition to helping on the family farm, Lori is active in her church youth group and Mohawk FFA chaplain a member of the parliamentary procedure team. She also enjoys square dancing, track, cross country track, and showing Aryshire and Brown Swiss.

Assisting in dairy promotion for the upcoming year are Ambassador Joy McConnell, daughter of John and Lois McConnell, Volant; dairy maids Rachel and Stacy Brunton, daughters of James and Mary Jane Brunton, Aliquippa; and Lane Whiting, daughter of David and Denise Whiting, Edinburg.

The pageant climaxed the day-long promotional event, which included dairy product displays provided by Schnieder Dairy, Dairy Farmers of America, and Land O' Lakes. Also on display were the awards and scrapbooks of former county dairy princesses.

For the first time, the Beaver-Lawrence Promotion Committee established the Outstanding Promoter of the Year Award presented to a person or persons who had donated unselfishly for the promotion of the dairy industry. This year's recipients were Joan Forbes and Blanche Kind.

Joan Forbes is the former owner of Forbes Buffalo Drive Inn. She was instrumental in starting the traditional giant banana split building at the Lawrence County Fair and donates all the ingredients for the past 14 years.

Beaver-Lawrence Counties will receive help in dairy promotion by these young promoters. From left are Dairy Maids Rachel Brunton and Lane Whiting, Ambassador Joy McConnell, and Dairy Maids Amy Liggett and Stacy Brunton.

At the 25th celebration of the Beaver-Lawrence Dairy Princess Pageant, Amy Liggett repeats history by clinching the dairy princess title won by her mother 25 years earlier. Assisting Amy is Alternate Lori Harman.

Blanche is a member of Grassy Crest Farm Family. She has been active for several years with the Holstein shows in which she plays the organ. She also played the organ for the 25th pageant celebration. As a past committee member she has donated to numerous promotions to do whatever needed to be done.

Julie McConnell was recipient of the Tina M. Shultz Memorial Award, for being the top promoter in the state.

Judges for the pageant were Arlene Martin of Brook Run Farm and co-owner of Dick Martin Trucking, Volant; Louise Fisher of Fisher Daiy, Portersville, and Becky Taylor Gallagher, Taylor Dairy Family, Ambridge.

District Justice of New Castle J.V. Lamb was master of ceremonies.

'Berry' Delicious

This is the season for raspberries, blackberries, dewberries, boysenberries, loganberries, and blueberries.

When purchasing, select berries that are firm, plump, and solid in color. While color depends on variety, a solid deep color is a good indicator of ripeness. Immature berries do not sweeten after they are picked and should not be purchased. Avoid buying leaky or stained containers of berries because they may be overripe when picked or damaged.

Refrigerate berries immediately. Blackberries can be refrigerated 5 to 7 days; black raspberries, 3 to 5 days; and red raspberries, 2 to 3 days. Do not wash berries before storing.

Wash berries gently and quickly in cold water just before serving. Gently lift them from the water and drain. Never soak berries in water or they will lose sugar, flavor, and color.

Bramble berries are interchangeable in recipes and may be substituted for strawberries in many recipes.

Berries are excellent to eat raw, over cereal, in salads and pies, and in preserves.

Avoid using aluminum, tin, or iron utensils or baking pans when using raspberries because the berries can turn from red to blue in color.

For more information on freezing and canning directions, contact your local county extension office and ask for the "Let's Preserve" fact sheet.

BLUE APPLE FROSTY

2 cups fresh or slightly thawed frozen blueberries
1 cup apple juice
1 cup vanilla frozen yogurt
½ cup milk
¾ teaspoon ground cinnamon

In blender combine blueberries, apple juice, frozen yogurt, milk, and cinnamon. Blend until smooth. Serve immediately. Yield: about 4 cups.

The best things often come in small packages—even when it comes to health. Recent studies have hailed blueberries as the reigning king of antioxidants—disease fighters that may also slow down the effects of aging.

Researches at the USDA Human Nutrition Research Center at Tufts University analyzed the total antioxidant activing of 40 fruits and vegetables and found blueberries to have the highest overall score. Anthocyanins, the pigments that make all blueberries blue, are thought to be the major contributors to their high antioxidant levels. Just one half cup of blueberries can provide as much antioxidant power as five servings of other nutritious fruits and vegetables such as broccoli, carrots, apples, squash, and peas. Of course, these foods supply other essential nutrients so variety is still the key to a healthful diet.

For delicious and healthful blueberry recipes, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to North American Blueberry Council, 4995 Golden Foothill Parkway, Suite #2, El Dorado Hills, CA 95762.

Try this Upside-Down Peach Berry Pie, which combines the nutrition of fresh berries with wheat germ, a source of six essential vitamins and minerals, including folate and vitamin E, as well as dietary fiber.

UPSIDE-DOWN PEACH BERRY PIE

Pastry:
1¼ cups all-purpose flour
⅓ cup wheat germ
1 teaspoon freshly grated lemon peel
¼ pound butter, chilled, cut into pieces
3 tablespoons honey
1 egg

Filling:
4 cups peeled, sliced ripe peaches or nectarines
2 cups blueberres, raspberries, blackberries or any combination
⅓ cup honey
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoons corn starch

For pastry, combine flour, wheat germ, and lemon peel in large bowl. Cut in butter with two knives until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. In small bowl, beat honey with egg. Add to dry ingredients all at once; stir with fork just until dough starts to hold together. Gather dough into a ball; place on waxed paper or plastic wrap and flatten to ¾ -inch thick disk. Wrap tightly; chill at least one hour or overnight.

Heat oven to 400 degrees. Remove pastry from refrigerator.

For filling, combine peaches and berries in large bowl. In small bowl, combine honey, lemon juice, and cornstarch; mix well. Add to fruit; stir gently until fruit is evenly coated. Spoon into 11x7-inch baking dish.

On sheet of lightly floured waxed paper, roll pastry into 11x7-inch rectangle. Cut 6 to 8 slits in rectangle. Invert onto baking dish; peel off paper.

Bake 10 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees. Continue baking 25 to 30 minutes or until fruit is bubbly and pastry is golden brown. If pastry begins to brown too quickly, cover loosely with foil. Serve warm or at room temperature.

8 servings.

Upside-Down Peach Berry Pie combines the nutrition goodness of berries plus wheat germ, which is the "heart" of the wheat kernel—a source of six essential vitamins and minerals, include folate and Vitamin E, as well as dietary fiber.

FRESH BLUEBERRY PIE

9-inch baked pie shell
4 cups blueberries
⅔ cup sugar
3 tablespoons corn starch
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup water
1 tablespoon butter

Combine 1 cup blueberries with sugar, corn starch, salt, lemon juice, and water. Cook and stir until thickened. Remove from heat, add butter and remaining blueberries. Cool. Pour into pie shell and chill. Can serve with whipped cream.

Sue Stockdale

BERRY BLUE SMOOTHIE

2 cups fresh or slightly thawed frozen blueberries
8-ounces low-fat vanilla yogurt
1 cup milk
6-ounce can unsweetened pineapple juice
3 tablespoons honey
1½ cups ice cubes

In blender place blueberries, yogurt, milk, pineapple juice, and honey; ocver and blend at medium speed until smooth. Increase speed to high; add ice cubes, a few at a time, until finely crushed. Serve immediately.

Yield about 5 cups.

FROZEN MIXED BERRY PIE

14-ounce sweetened condensed milk
½ cup lemon juice
1½ -2 cups assorted fresh raspberries, blueberries, or blackberries
4 cups frozen whipped topping, thawed
8- or 9-inch baked pastry shell

Stir together condensed milk and lemon juice until well combined. Mix in berries. Fold in whipped topping. Spoon mixture into ready-made pie crust. Freeze five hours or until set. Let stand 30-40 minutes before serving. Garnish as desired.

BLUEBERRY GRUNT

6 tablespoons butter
1 cup flour
1 cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
¾ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 cups blueberries

Melt butter in 12x7x2-inch pan. Stir together flour, sugar, baking powder, and dash of salt. Stir in milk and vanilla.

Pour over melted butter. Sprinkle blueberries on top.

Bake 375 degrees for 30 minutes or until golden. Serve with whipped cream. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Kids Learn Healthful Choices are Fun

Young children spend each day learning about the world around them. They ask lots of questions. They love to copy the adults around them. Healthy eating habits and food choices are part of this learning.

To help instill healthy eating habits in children, caregivers, teachers, and parents can plan fun learning activities that include a variety of healthy foods. Here are a few activities that attach a play-mode technique to learning about healthy food:

Focus on shapes, colors, and sounds. Give lessons on all orange foods or orange circular foods. Cantaloupe balls, cheddar cheese circles, an orange or carrot "coins" are a few examples. It is also fun to put a variety of foods on a tray and ask children to find foods that are the same color, same shape, noisy or quiet. Beans are noisy while a banana is quiet.

Serve a meal based on numbers. For example, 1 glass of milk, 2 halves of an apple, 3 cucumber slices, 4 carrot sticks and 5 strawberries. Cutting an item into many pieces lets older children understand fractions and eat fruit and vegetables as you go.

Select one day each week to go to the grocery store and pick out a new fruit, vegetable, bean or grain. Let the children help you prepare it and talk about its benefits and how it helps keep their body healthy. They can make a play refrigerator out of a box then make a picture of that food and store in in there during the week. They always enjoy playing restaurant and serving others with their play food. Quiz them on how that food makes their body healthy and see if they can tell others. After a while their play refrigerator will have quite a few healthy selections in it.

Involve children with food choices and preparation. A fun way to get started is to allow kids to pick out a variety of plastic containers with different shapes and colors. Let the children fill these with nutritious snacks and place them on the bottom shelf of the refrigerator. Children can help themselves at snack-time to the treats they helped make.

Set aside one afternoon every other week to prepare a healthy, child-friendly recipe. Older kids can even write the recipe on paper by drawing the ingredients that went into it. Younger ones might color a paper that is predrawn and copied by you. Some ideas are: make whole wheat bread dough and shape it into a variety of items like worms, snails or turtles and bake them. These can be dipped into tomato or fruit sauce for a yummy treat. Make pizza using canned sauce and tortillas. Let the kids form designs with vegetables on top, such as a funny face, and then bake them.

Find an activity that a child enjoys and encourage him or her to excel at it based on the foods he or she chooses. For a child who likes to color, carrots can help him see the colors better. For a child who likes to play soccer and prides himself on being a fast runner, spinach can be considered a "GO" food whereas candy bars are "SLOW" food. Encourage your child. Make learning fun.

Hans Herr Holds Heritage Days

WILLOW STREET (Lancaster Co.) — The Hans Herr House will celebrate the 20th annual Heritage Day on August 7. This farm festival features demonstrations of rural life and activities from the 18th century to the early 20th.

1999 also marks the 25th year since the Hans Herr House opened as a museum. On Heritage Day, visitors will be able to see the 1719 house and grounds, as well as the restored 1835 Shaub House across the road. The crafts that have made Heritage Day one of the most popular events of the year will be demonstrated, including threshing, corn shelling, hearth cooking, outdoor oven baking, dyeing, weaving, linen processing, and pottery making. There are also wagon rides, children's activities, and various scheduled workshops throughout the day. Roasted corn, ice cream, rhubarb punch, hot dogs, pies, and other refreshments will be available for purchase.

Admission to Heritage Day is $5 for adults, $1 for children ages 7-12, ages 6 and under are free.

The Hans Herr House is located at 1849 Hans Herr Drive, Willow Street, 5 miles south of Lancaster, off Rts. US 222 and PA 741 between the villages of Willow Street and Lampeter. For more information call (717) 464-4438.

BERRY CHIFFON SHORT PIE

¼ cup sugar
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
10-ounce package frozen raspberries or strawberries, thawed
3 egg whites
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
⅓ cup sugar
½ cup whipping cream, whipped

Blend in saucepan: sugar, gelatin, raspberries. Bring to full rolling boil, stirring constantly. Cool pan in cold water until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon.

Add cream of tartar to egg whites, beat until frothy.

Gradually beat in sugar and beat until meringue holds stiff peaks. Fold berry mixture into meringue. Carefully fold in whipped cream. Pile into cooled, baked pie shell. Chill several hours until set.

ANSWER — In answer to the request for honey mustard pretzels made without a purchased mix, Rachel Zook, Kinzers, sends this recipe that she said her husband says are better than store bought.

Honey Mustard Pretzels

2-pounds broken sourdough pretzels

Break pretzels as fine as possible into a large bowl. Mix together:

1 cup vegetable oil
½ cup salad mustard
½ cup honey
¼ cup sour cream and onion powder, if desired

Pour mixture over broken pretzels and mix thoroughly with a spatula trying to make sure every pretzel is coated.

Spread coated pretzels in a pan. Bake at 200 degrees, stirring every 15-20 minutes for approximately two hours or until done.

Delicious while warm or cool and store in an airtight container until ready to serve.

Creamy Chicken Mushroom Casserole

4 pounds chicken pieces, thighs, wings, breasts, legs, etc.
1 can cream of chicken soup
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 tablespoon dried chives
1 tablespoon dried onion
¼ cup chopped fresh parsley

In 5-quart microwave casserole, put chicken, soups, and herbs. Mix gently.

Microwave on high 25-35 minutes, stirring about 4 times. Test with sharp fork for doneness. If necessary, microwave an additional 5 minutes.

BEST LOVED BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

1 cup milk
½ cup butter, melted
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 cups all-purpose flour
⅓ cup sugar
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup fresh or frozen blueberries

Topping:
¼ cup butter, melted
¼ cup sugar

Heat oven to 400 degrees. In large bowl, combine milk, butter, and egg. Add all remaining muffing ingredients except blueberries. Stir just until flour is moistened. Gently stir in blueberries.

Spoon into greased 12-cup muffin pan. Bake for 24 to 28 minutes or until golden brown. Cool slightly; remove from pan.

Dip tops of muffins in melted butter, then in sugar. 1 dozen

Variations:

Lemon-Blueberry Muffins: Stir in 1 tablespoon grated lemon peel with flour.

Raspberry-White Chocolate Chip Muffins: Substitute 1 cup fresh or frozen raspberries for blueberries. Gently stir in ½ cup vanilla-flavored white chocolate chips with the raspberries.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — For the person who wanted a recipe for garlic simmered in oil and vinegar, here is one from Betty Light.

Garlic Simmered In Oil And Vinegar

2 heads garlic
½ cup extra-virgin olive oil
¼ cup balsamic vinegar
½ teaspoon salt

Break the heads into individual cloves and peel. Place the cloves in a saucepan with oil, vinegar, and salt. Cook over medium-low heat.

Cook until tender, regulating the heat so the cloves do not burn, 30 to 45 minutes. The vinegar will glaze the garlic and evaporate. When there is only oil left in the pan and the garlic cloves are soft, they are done. Strain and store garlic and oil separately in the refrigerator. Use garlic within a few days and the oil within 2 weeks.

ANSWER — G. Minkle, Wayne, wanted a recipe for hot pepper cabbage relish, which she had clipped from this column several years ago. Here is a recipe from the Heinz Company.

Hot Pepper Relish

1½ pounds jalpeno, banana, or Anaheim chili peppers or combination
1 medium onion, chopped
3 cups shredded cabbage
1½ cups apple cider vinegar
¾ cup granulated sugar
½ cup water
1 tablespoon pickling salt
1 tablespoon snipped fresh cilantro
1 teaspoon celery seed
2 cloves garlic, minced

Wash, remove stems and chop peppers. In a 6- to 8-quart saucepot, combine peppers and remaining ingredients. Mix well. Bring to a boil over medium-high heat, stirring occasionally. Boil for 8- to 10-minutes or until thickened, stirring frequently to prevent sticking. Immediately fill hot pint or half-pint jars with mixture, leaving ½ -inch headspace. Carefully run a nonmetallic utensil down inside of jars to remove trapped air bubbles. Wipe jar tops and threads clean. Place lids on jars and screw bands on firmly. Process pints or half-pints in boiling water canner for 15 minutes. Serve as an accompaniment to Mexican, southwestern, egg or cheese main dishes or sandwiches. Makes about 3 pints or 6 to 7 half-pints.

Canning, Freezing Workshops

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — Consumers interested in learning about or brushing up on their knowledge of home canning or freezing are invited to attend one of six upcoming workshops, "Home Canning and Freezing Basics."

Offered by Penn State Cooperative Extension of Bradford County, the workshops will include the latest research based information on how to preserve foods at home. Using canning/freezing equipment, participants will be walked through the processes of boiling water bath canning, pressure canning, and preparing foods for the freezer, although actual food preservation will not be done. Instructor for the workshops is Cathy Guffey, extension family living agent.

Each workshop will include a 90-minute program on canning and a 45-minute program on freezing. Participants may choose to attend the entire workshop or just come for the canning program or freezing program. There is no fee to attend.

Individuals planning to attend are asked to register by contacting the Extension Office at (570) 265-2896 (or call the site to register when it is noted with a "*") at least two days in advance of the program date. If no one is registered for a site by this time that workshop will be cancelled. When registering, indicate at which site you will be attending and at what times.

Dates, places, and workshop times are as follows:

• Thursday, July 15, Stoll Center, Wysox – 6:30 p.m. Canning, 8:15 p.m. Freezing.

• Wednesday, July 21*, Spaulding Memorial Library, Athens – 6:30 p.m. Canning, 8:15 Freezing.

• Friday, July 23*, Green Free Library, Canton – 9:30 a.m. Canning, 11:15 a.m. Freezing.

• Tuesday, August 3*, Sullivan County Extension Office, Dushore – 9:30 a.m. Canning, 11:15 a.m. Freezing.

• Wednesday, August 4, Troy Community Hospital Conference Room – 6:30 p.m. Canning, 8:15 p.m. Freezing.

• Tuesday, August 10, Dille Parish House, LeRaysville – 9:30 a.m. Canning, 11:15 a.m. Freezing.

ANSWER — Dan Berausky, Bridgeton, N.J., wanted pickle recipes. Charles Herweyh, West Chester, writes that Mrs. Wages dill, sweet, and bread and butter pickles mixes are available in supermarkets or by calling 1-800-647-8170.

A free copy of the "Heinz Successful Pickling Guide and Alltrista's annual "Newsline" is available by writing to Canning & Pickling Made Easy, P.O. Box 57, Pittsburgh, PA 15230.

Here is an easy refrigerator pickle recipe from a reader.

Sweet & Crunchy Pickles

8 cucumbers, peeled
2 large onions

Slice cukes and onions very thinly. Add:

1 teaspoon celery seed
1 tablespoon Kosher salt

Let stand one hour, stirring occasionally. Dissolve 2 cups sugar in 1 cup white vinegar. After standing time for vegetables, add vinegar mixture. Refrigerate immediately. Let set 2 weeks. These pickles are crunchy and sweet. They're still good at Christmastime after six months in the 'fridge.

Members of the Berks County 4-H Beef Club crane the heads forward to see the screen of the computer monitor that reveals the results of an ultrasound test on a steer. Along with the results is a picture of the animal's back on the computer screen. Dr. Lenora Sammons points out the backfat, ribs, ribeye area, and muscle marbling, as it appears on the screen. Ultrasound testing is growing in use and holds the promise of great benefits in advancing the ability to breed beef cattle with dependable quality.

Berks County 4-H Beef Club Learns About Ultrasound At Willow Creek

EMILIE MILLER
Reporter
Berks Co. 4-H
Beef Club

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — The Berks County 4-H Beef Club recently had a chance to see first hand a new tool being used across the nation by cattle producers, that will help the beef industry greatly in coming years.

At their April meeting, members of the club went to the Willow Creek Animal Hospital in Leesport to watch an ultrasound demonstration by Dr. Lenora Sammons, owner of the clinic.

Ultrasound is a technique that transforms sound waves into electronic pulses.

A computer transforms the resulting data (the direction of the echoes and intensity of the pulses) into an image which shows up on the computer screen.

Dr. Sammons performed an ultrasound on two pregnant dairy heifers.

"The ideal age of an embryo when doing an ultrasound is between 45 and 55 days," said Dr. Sammons.

The computer screen that was hooked up to the ultrasound showed two live, healthy calves.

By measuring the length of the embryo's spine and comparing it to a scale on the computer, it was possible to tell that the ages of the two embryos were 50 days and 55 days.

The ultrasound technique, as it is performed on animals, was developed by a professor from Cornell University, Dr. Jim Stouffer.

Cattle producers across the nation are using this new method to tell if the embryo inside the cow is healthy, what sex it is, how old it is, when the projected due date is, and to show if there are multiple embryos.

Following the ultrasound for pregnancies, Dr. Sammons performed a carcass analysis on a steer that showed his fat thickness, ribeye areas, and intramuscular fat, also known as marbling.

Ultrasounds that are being used on steers for this use are becoming very popular in feedlot operations.

Jane Messenger from Beef, an Intertec publication, said, "With a goal of more muscle and less fat, more breeders are looking at ultrasound as part of the on-farm selection process."

Craig Ludwig, director of research for the American Hereford Association (AHA), recently said, "On-farm, real-time ultrasound testing gives you preliminary indication of themuscle and fat in an animal. It eliminates the fact that you have to slaughter animals to do progeny tests by measuring fat and ribeye thickness."

During the Willow Creek clinic, the image of the steer's back that appeared on the screen showed that the steer had 1.7 centimeters of backfat.

Members also got to view the ribeye and spine. The backfat along with ribeye area are both measured between the 12th and 13th ribs.

Carcass data is being collected by the beef industry in the same way other traits have been tracked over the years. It is be used to predict expected progency differences, in the same way that birth, weaning, and yearling weights are estimated.

The goal is to be able to select bulls that will produce calves that are below the breed average in fat thickness, and above average in marbling and ribeye area.

Analyzing steers and heifers as yearlings with ultrasounds helps measure this data.

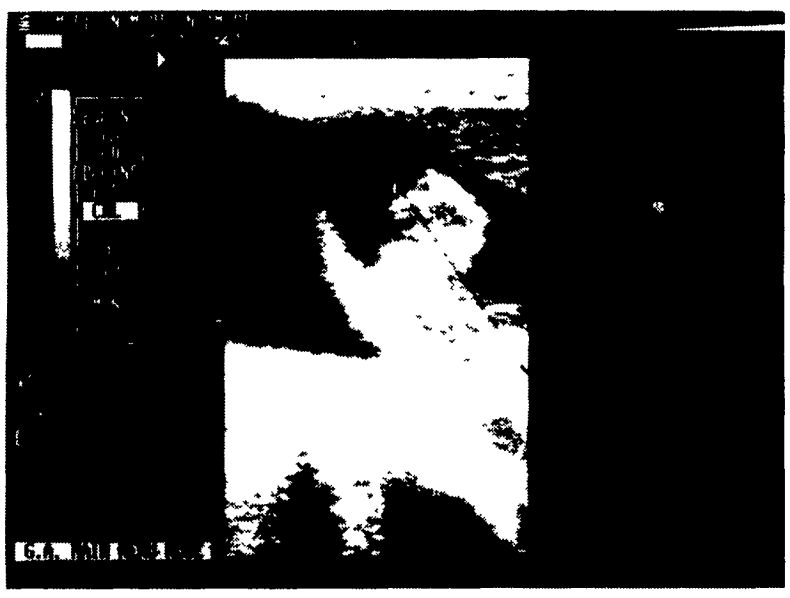
Multiple-trait selection is the only sensible way to make selection decisions, according to carcass analysis professionals. Cattle that are extremely high in quality in one trait are frequently extremely low in quality in another trait.

After the ultrasounds were completed, members went on a tour of the clinic. The tour was given by Scott Artz.

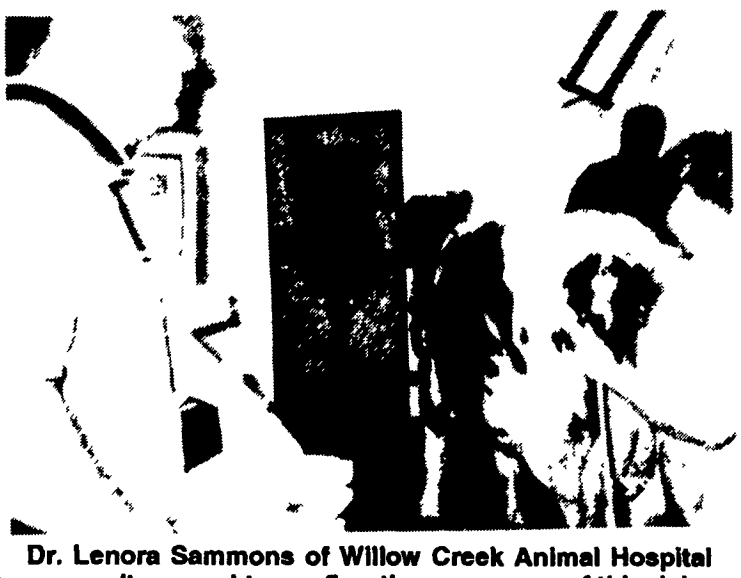
"Willow Creek has about 50 percent large animal patients and 50 percent small animal patients," Artz said. "There are seven large animals vets and three small animal vets."

Members got to see the operating room and sterile room, where all the tools used in operations are sanitized after each use.

Mr. Artz showed members around the supply rooms and explained an average day for both small and large animal vets.



While the ultrasound device is a constantly measuring device, specific images can be captured like a photograph, though they may not make sense unless explained by a trained professional. This is an image of a 55-day old calf embryo.



Dr. Lenora Sammons of Willow Creek Animal Hospital uses an ultrasound to confirm the pregnancy of this dairy heifer. She found a 55-day-old calf embryo.

Dr. Lenora Sammons, of Willow Creek Animal Hospital, demonstrates how to measure a steer's backfat and ribeye area using ultrasound to members of the Berks County 4-H Beef Club.

Stefanie Long Named Tioga County Dairy Princess

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Tioga Co. Correspondent

WHITNEYVILLE (Tioga Co.) — An exciting year awaits Stefanie Long as she was crowned the 1999 Tioga County Dairy Princess at a pageant held Monday, June 14, at the Tioga County Fairgrounds.

With the title come many responsibilities that Stefanie says she's ready to tackle.

"I just want to say thank you to everyone for getting me this far. Everyone in this room has contributed. This was my dream!" she said.

Although she was the only contestant, Long was required to prepare and deliver a presentation and answer an impromptu question.

Posing as an extremely active and healthy older woman, Long touted the benefits of drinking milk in her presentation.

"I am 99 years old and as you can tell, I should live well into the next moollennium," she stated. "I was going to wait until I was 100 to tell you my secrets, but it's too important to me. I drink milk and exercise every day," she said.

To the question, "It's a hot summer day, how would you try to persuade a teen-ager to drink a dairy product instead of a soft drink?" Stefanie answered, "I would tell them that milk is not only cool and refreshing, but very nutritious. Soda is just acid and not very good for you."

Long is a member of the class of 2001 at Williamson High School. She is also a member of Cowanesque Valley FFA, Williamson Peer Helpers, Band, and is a Flag Squad co-captain. She also serves as an assistant Girl Scout leader and is a Senior Girl Scout.

The Long family resides on Ter-Lin Farm, a 103-acre Ayrshire - Holstein - Jersey dairy near Lawrenceville, where Stefanie owns 14 cattle.

Long was crowned by 1998 Tioga County Dairy Princess Kristina Baker. 1999 alternates Amanda Graves and Emily Norman were also on hand to help with the celebration.

Baker remarked that her year as Dairy Princess was wonderful and she couldn't have done everything without the help of lots of people.

"I can't believe I was standing up here just one year ago getting crowned Tioga County Dairy Princess. I was at my cousin's graduation on Saturday, and I thought, 'This is unreal, where does the time go?' But it's like they say, time flies when you're having fun, and that's exactly what my reign was," said Baker who swore that she would not cry during her presentation.

The tears started flowing, however, when she explained that she had dedicated her year to the memory of her grandfather, Dan Baker, a well-known dairy promoter and former head of the area's Dairy of Distinction Program.

Rounding out the 1999 Dairy Promotion crew in Tioga County are Dairy Maids Kimberly Baker, daughter of William and Rebecca Baker; Sara Derstine, daughter of Jon and Betsy Derstine; Renee Norman, daughter of David and Aggie Norman; and Melinda Oakley, daughter of Mark and Penny Oakley.

Stefanie Long, daughter of Terry and Linda Long of Lawrenceville, was crowned the 1999 Tioga County Dairy Princess at a recent pageant.

On The Farm With State Dairy Princess Jennifer Dotterer

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MILL HALL (Clinton Co.) — "When I was in high school, peer pressure implied that it was uncool to be a dairy farmer," said Jennifer Dotterer.

So she turned her back on the family's Clinton County farm and headed off to Delaware Valley College.

Away from the family farm and negative peer pressure, Jennifer gained a more balanced perspective.

She missed the farm.

"Now I know the dairy industry is where I want to be," said the 20-year-old, who also reigns as the Pennsylvania State Dairy Princess.

"I want to take over the family farm and keep the family tradition going," she said.

The family tradition is no small operation. Jennifer's dad Larry, his brother John, and her grandfather farm 2,200 acres and milk 500 cows in partnership. The farm employs seven full-time milkers and eight farmhands.

When Jennifer is at home, she's mostly found in the barn, doctoring sick cows by administering pills, shots, and intravenous injections, and assisting in minor surgeries. That's her favorite responsibility. But mowing grass around the barns, assisting with fieldwork, relief milking, and bedding calves are some of her other duties.

The farm was purchased in 1951 by her grandfather Paul and is known as the Paul Dotterer & Sons, Inc. Dairy Farms.

Her dad Larry and Jennifer's sisters Amanda, 18, and Candice, 15, work together on the farm. Jennifer's mother Joyce works off the farm for her family's construction business.

The farm has changed quite a bit. Stalls were removed from the old buildings and are now used for machinery storage. Five new freestall barns were built. Cows are milked on a carousel parlor that floats on water.

To calm fears and ease stress when facing new experiences, Jennifer said that she carries a small aerial photograph of the family farm in hand and concentrates on it to calm her.

This method worked effectively at the state pageant last September when she competed for the state dairy princess title.

To accommodate her dairy princess requirements, Jennifer cut college back to part-time this past year at Del Val.

She prefers the small-size college and knows the majority of the 1,400 students. At the College she is part of the Block and Briddle Club, the Dairy Society, Sigma Alpha, which is an ag Sorority, and the National Ag Marketing Association.

This is the perfect summer for Jennifer. Before heading back to start her junior year majoring in dairy science at Delaware Valley College, Jennifer is working on the farm and fulfilling the many dairy promotions required by state princesses.

"I love it all," she said.

Up at 6:30 a.m. and immersed in dairying, Jennifer said, "The real world is hard compared to school. People don't realize how hard farming is unless they've done it."

Her dairy princess duties have demanded crisscross trips across the state to speak before hundreds of farm and nonagricultural audiences. She's dished up hundreds of dips of ice cream and prepared unending numbers of milkshakes, has been covered with chocolate ice cream, and persevered through appearances when she was so sick she could barely talk.

Not every duty is dairy-related. At a Farm City Day celebration, Jennifer was induced to sample chocolate-covered crickets, which she thought tasted crunchy and burned. She tried to trick the dairy princess coordinator into eating them as chocolate-covered raisins, but Arlene Wilbur is wise to the pranks of youth and was not deceived.

Horse riding has always been a large part of Jennifer's life. She took 10 years of horse riding lessons and showed in 4-H competitions. For six years in a row, she qualified for state competition where she always placed in the top 10. Between college and dairy princesses duties, Jennifer hasn't had any time to ride her Tennessee Walker named Midnight Amanda.

Jennifer is a former outstanding 4-H'er in Clinton County. During her 11-years of 4-H involvement, she belonged to Windy Acres 4-H, Horses Unlimited 4-H, dairy and livestock judging teams, was a teen leader for the livestock and horse clubs, and served as 4-H ambassador. In 1996, she was named the oustanding senior 4-H girl. She showed pigs, steers, and lambs.

"I had a lot of success with pigs," Jennifer said.

In 1997, she had the grand champion market hog at Clinton County Fair from a gilt she purchased, bred, farrowed. She also received numerous showmanship and fitting awards.

A graduate of Bald Eagle-Nittany High School, Jennifer had been a varsity cheerleader for wrestling and basketball, and a member of the French, Spanish, yearbook, and environmenal clubs.

However, whether at home or in a motel, Jennifer finds time to tune into NASCAR racing.

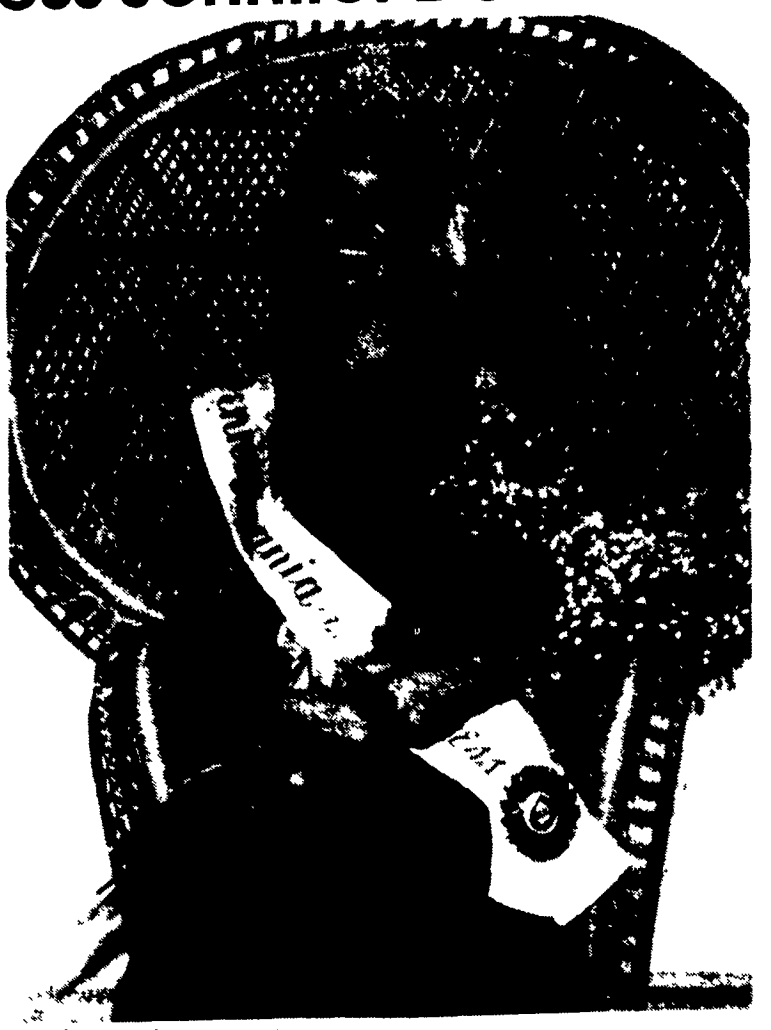
She said, "When I was an eighth grader I wondered what all the commotion was about in racing. I started watching and fell in love with Rusty Wallace."

Other relaxing hobbies include collecting "Gone With the Wind," memorabilia, reading, walking, and jumping on the family's giant trampoline.

Jennifer keeps close tabs on the Internet with Alternates Lacey Zakostelecky, Crawford County, and Megan Myers, Franklin County, who help her with state dairy promotions.

Jennifer is engaged To Ben McElwanin of White Hall, Md. They met each other at college when Ben was a senior and she a freshman. He works on his family's beef farm. The couple plan to marry in June 2001.

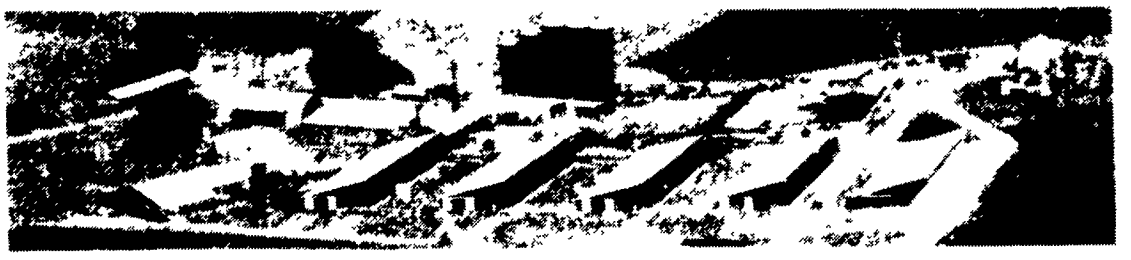
In the meantime, Jennifer will continue college, where she looks forward to competing on the dairy judging team. She will also be on Centre-Clinton Counties dairy bowl team for the Junior Holstein Convention 2000.



Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Jennifer Dotterer knows that the dairy industry holds the career for her. She'd like to work in dairy promotion and someday run the family's dairy farm in Clinton County.

The Dotterer family includes Candice, 15; Amanda, 18; Jennifer, 20; and parents Larry and Joyce.

Horse riding has always played a large part in Jennifer's life. She took 10 years of riding lessons and showed in 4-H competitions. For six years in a row, she qualified for state competition where she always placed in the top 10.



The Paul Dotterer & Sons, Inc. Dairy Farms encompass 2,200 acres and a carousel parlor that floats on water is used to milk 500 cows. Jennifer said that whenever she feels stressed when away from home, she concentrates on this aerial view of her farm and becomes calm.

"Some of the family's most memorable moments are spent gathered around the kitchen table—talking, laughing, and enjoying delicious home-cooked foods prepared with that extra touch of love," Jennifer said.

Here are some of her family's favorite recipes that Jennifer hopes readers will enjoy as much as her family does.

"And don't forget to have a glass of milk with your meal!" she said.

Creamy Fettuccine Primavera

8-ounces fettuccine
1 cup broccoli flowerets
1 cup cut carrots
½ cup red pepper
1¾ cup skim milk
8-ounces cream cheese, cubed
½ cup chopped green onions
½ teaspoon Italian seasoning
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
1 cup diced turkey or chicken
½ cup grated parmesan cheese

Prepare fettuccine as directed on package, adding broccoli, carrots, and red pepper during last 5 minutes of cooking time; drain. Stir skim milk, cream cheese, onions, and seasonings in medium saucepan on low heat until smooth. Stir in turkey and parmesan cheese. Toss pasta and vegetables with sauce.

Blueberry Cream Cheese Squares

1 cup sugar, divided
⅓ cup butter
1½ cups graham cracker crumbs
1 can blueberry pie filling
3 8-ounce packages cream cheese
4 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. In a medium saucepan, place ¼ cup sugar and butter; heat until butter is melted, stirring occasionally. Stir in graham cracker crumbs; press mixture evenly over the bottom of 13x9-inch baking pan. In a large bowl with an electric mixer, beat cream cheese until smooth. Gradually beat in remaining ¾ cup sugar. Beat in eggs, one at a time, and vanilla until well blended. Spoon blueberry filling evenly over crust. Carefully pour cream cheese mixture over blueberries. Bake just until set, 45-50 minutes. Cool, chill until cold (about 2 hours). Cut into squares.

What's Happening At Lancaster Extension

by

Elizabeth Smith

Summer Intern

Thank-you for joining me today on "Wild 4-H," the nature program that takes you out of your air-conditioned home and puts you right in the middle of wildlife action. This week we are out on assignment observing wildlife at 4-H Camp Shehaqua. My name is Elizabeth Smith, Lancaster 4-H summer assistant and your host for our expedition. As summer assistant I was lucky enough to get the opportunity to travel to camp and spend four days and three nights with 91 4-H'ers and all of the wilflilfe located at Camp Shehaqua. The most exotic wildlife at camp would have to be the 4-H'ers; however, even they could not compete with some of the other "visitors" that attended.

My first guest was a fat-faced little chipmunk who was happily making his home in my cabin! It was quite a surprise to open the door to my room, only to have the chipmunk shoot for the door at about 50 miles per hour. Silly girl that I am, I assumed that it would be the last time I would catch him in this part of the woods, but as usual I had spoken too soon. Mr. Chipmunk had entered my room through an open door. I now firmly closed the door after I exited each morning figuring that would solve the problem. It did, in a manner of speaking. It turns out that this particular chipmunk didn't take defeat quite so gracefully. He was so determined to get back into my room, that I would find him trying to get under the door many times after our first encounter. Of course, he never did succeed but I do admire his determination!

After spending all day with the kids and one very determined chipmunk, I decided that going to bed would be the most relaxing thing I could do. I was sharing a cabin with two other summer assistants from Lebanon County and we decided to turn in at the same time. There was only one small problem with our plan. Actually it was more like one big problem accompanied by three little ones. In other words, one big mama black bear and her three cubs! Every night bears come and raid the dumpsters here at camp. This would not have been a problem for us if it wasn't for the fact that our cabin was located near the dumpsters! Now, I do not have a great knowledge of bears but I am smart enough to know you never bother a female bear with cubs. With this in mind, we began to form a plan of how to get the mama bear and her cubs away from our cabin in a safe and orderly fashion. Obviously we could not approach the bear by foot, for fear of our lives. No, there was only one way to remove this problem, we needed the power of a Honda. Well really we needed a car and it just so happened that the only one we had access to was a Honda. So there we all were, three college-educated girls sitting inside of a car, flashing our lights at a dumpster in the middle of the night. As you can imagine this did look pretty funny, but in the end it did do the job. The mama bear left the dumpsters and then proceeded to collect her cubs from out of a nearby tree. After making sure the coast was clear, we then ran back to our cabin and tightly closed the door.

While my nocturnal romp with the bears was frightening it was also pretty neat since it was the first time I saw a bear in the wild and I figured it would probably be the last time. I mean how many times does a person really see a black bear in the wild anyway? More than you would think, as it turned out.

Bears apparently get more brazen as they get older; of course this is just an assumption on my part, but it is the only explanation I can come up with to explain the events that took place that Thursday at camp. It was about 6:30 p.m. at camp and all of the campers were meeting in their groups in order to prepare for the final campfire that evening. I was working with one of the groups and helping to keep order. As we were working, I just happened to glance toward the woods and see a huge black bear heading straight for the dumpsters, which by chance just happened to be where we were working! Unfortunately I was not the only one who noticed the bear. It had come to the attention of the campers as well, and now they were all preparing to take this large bear's picture!

It was at this time we decided that maybe it would be better if we worked inside for the rest of the evening. So with much harsh whispering and some coordination we slowly transferred the campers to the dining hall and away from Mr. Bear. The dining hall was near the dumpsters so the campers were able to watch the bear without being in danger. There wasn't that much danger however, since the only thing this bear was interested in was the trash in the dumpsters! His acrobatics while retrieving the trash from the dumpsters could only be compared to the comedy routine of the Three Stooges. There he sat perched on the side of the dumpster with his rear end in the air! The campers in the dining hall could not help but fall into fits of laughter as he mooned them all! We determined that our "comedian" was an older male bear who just wanted to get dinner and could care less about anything else. After he had his fill he left the same way he came leaving behind a mess of trash and an experience the campers would never forget.

That just about sums up my week at camp here on, Wild 4-H. I do hope you'll join us next time when we travel to even more exotic and exciting places. Until next time I'm Elizabeth Smith. 4-H summer assistant and professional bear remover, hoping you have happy travels and always remember to close your door. You never know just who might be trying to get in.

Mountain View Hosts Day At Farm

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — Owners Doug and Debra Hillegass saw guests come and go on Sunday, June 27, when they hosted A Day at the Farm for the Somerset County Farm Bureau. Their children Desirae, Justin, and Jared joined them.

Mountain View Farms is aptly named considering the surrounding scenery stretching away from the farm buildings and family dwelling along Route 31, 10 miles east of Somerset.

It is the home of Hill-A-Way Holsteins, a dairy business of some 352 milking cows, and a philosophy that anticipates the onset of a new century with a family farm that is strong.

"It is a family operation and a group effort around here," reports Debra.

Harold Shaulis, a county farmer, was chairman of A Day at the Farm.

"We want to educate people as to where their food and fiber comes from," he said about the event attended by about 1,100 persons.

The continuous hayrides provided a tour of the farm. New farming techniques were explained, including manure storage, new uses for corn, tillage techniques to conserve soil and water, and new animal nutrition concepts.

Manure, for example is used as fertilizer, but the public generally is ignorant about its being applied to the land only at certain times in order to maximize its effectiveness and reduce the amount of run-off.

Once this is understood, Shaulis indicated, it may be easier to tolerate unpleasant odors that linger for a short time thereafter.

Events such as A Day at the Farm, therefore, promote friendly relations and a good understanding between the farmer and his non-farming neighbors.

The farmstead's main campus was ideal for folks who enjoy walking. They got exercise moving from the free stall barn and big milking parlor to the calf greenhouse and hayride headquarters, to the food sample tent.

Dairy promotion gals were busy serving ice cold milk and milk punch as patrons redeemed tickets for a free sample at the Little Red Barn.

Other promotion groups joined to serve samples of commodities produced in Somerset County.

Demonstrations included sheep shearing and square dancing. There was a hay bale tossing contest, petting zoo, and a milk drinking contest.

Experts were on hand to discuss conservation and forestry and other aspects of Pennsylvania agriculture since one-fifth of the state's work force, reportedly, is employed in agricultural-related enterprises.

The reigning dairy princess, Melissa Powell, went about the premises asking relevant questions of visitors and awarding them a prize when they answered correctly.

Powell was joined by Susanna Thomas, her successor and alternate, Juliana Hillegass both selected the previous night. Julie Sechler, the Pennsylvania State Fair Queen, made it a royal foursome.

One reason that Doug and Debra Hillegass agreed to host the affair was after they expanded their operation a few years ago, they got too busy to hold a celebration that friends and neighbors could attend.

"We never had an open house," stated Doug, who reports his deceased dad, Glendon Hillegass broke into farming with 12 milking cows.

When Shaulis approached them the timing seemed right.

In addition to the five family members it takes three full-time employees to operate Mountain View Farms.

"Farming is there, day after day," said the dairyman.

Douglas and Debra Hillegass, Berlin hosted Somerset County Day at the Farm. They are pictured with children Desirae, Justin, and Jared.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

This morning a neighbor stopped in to tell us that his well is dry, and they must get water from a friend. Even the field corn has curled leaves and would welcome some rain.

A few weeks ago, we had no water as our pump stopped running. However, a plumber discovered that what we needed was a $200 pressure tank. At least we still have water even though my husband waters his many small nut trees that he has planted on a hill in the meadow.

Years ago we had to depend on a farmer for water to wash our milking equipment. His kind sharing will never be forgotten. You see, when the Conestoga River is very low, then the level of the water in the shallow hand-dug well on the farm drops too low to be useable. It amazes me to think that on the farm where I grew up, there was a 65-foot hand-dug well. I can't even imagine how they managed to dig it and wall it with stone.

On my grandfather's farm, when they dug a well long ago, they almost had a disaster. While they were eating their dinner, the wall collapsed and fell in on all of their tools. They dug a well at another location after that occurence.

My husband has spent many hours trying to repair the water line in his camper in Snyder County. It seems that we do not appreciate water until we have none.

Despite the lack of water, we are picking a lot of black raspberries. I made jelly only one time as it is a job that really colors everything purple. We won't have red raspberries this year as a disease has killed the whole row. But, my yellow raspberries are very sweet and the grandchildren like to pick them.

Agri-Women File Suit

HARDIN, Mt. — On June 7, American Agri-Women (AAW) was among 15 farm and agribusiness groups to file suit requesting that Environmental Protection Agency follow statutory requirements in assessing and reassessing pesticides under the Food Quality Protection Act of 1996. The groups joined with American Crop Protection Association and American Farm Bureau in asking, among other things, that EPA update its regulations by specifying data requirements; utilize data call-in procedures rather than rely on defaults, theoretical models and assumptions; and implement notice and comment rulemaking, rather than informal and draft policies. The legal action amends June 2 complaint filing which asked EPA to issue "emergency use" (Section 18) regulations.

According to AAW President Carol Ann Gregg, the suit was brought because EPA is implementing FQPA without following the rulemaking process required by law to ensure public participation. She pointed out that the group's action reflects the direction given EPA by Vice President Gore last year that FQPA implementation must be based on sound science.

American Agri-Women is a national coalition of individual members as well as 52 state and commodity organizations promoting agriculture for the benefit of the American people and the world.

For more information regarding AAW, contact Carol Ann Gregg, president, at 147 Old Mill Rd., Grove City, PA 16127; (724) 458-6108 or email <Farmwrite@pathway.net> Visit their website: www.americanagriwomen.com

You ask You answer

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

Do not send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply. If we receive the answer, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it.

Franklin County senior 4-H dairy club members receiving project book awards for the 1998 project year were, from left, LeAnn Helman, Chambersburg; Kara Oliver, Greencastle; Bradley Reichard, Chambersburg; Barbara Reichard, Waynesboro; Kyle Burdette, Mercersburg; Andrew Stoner, Waynesboro; and Hannal Hess, Waynesboro. Not present to receive an award were Abigail Stoner, St. Thomas; Lauren Crider, St. Thomas; and Grace Webster, Greencastle. The awards were presented at the Franklin County 4-H Dairy Awards Banquet and Reorganization Meeting at the New Franklin Ruritan Gospel Community Center. Master of ceremonies for the evening was Bradley Reichard. Ryan Grove, Greencastle, led the 4-H pledge and Monica Myers, Mercersburg, offered the invocation.

Green Grove Community 4-H

On May 22, the Green Grove Community 4-H Club conducted a meeting.

John Sherman stated that the old business consisted mainly of the idea that thank-you notes should be given out to people who made generous contributions for this 1999 season.

Rev. Sherman named everyone who gave donations. They were Jenine Bibalo, Tom Oliver, Larry Winkler, John Sherman, and the Green Grove Community Church.

Debbie Musser passed out song print-outs and they all joined in singing.

The business meeting was adjourned. Numbers were given out to each member and number 1 was given first pick from the "table of treasures."

The fishing group went back to the seats with leader Larry Winkler where they worked on their 4-H fishing books. Mr. Winkler handed out fish anatomy sheets and the children were given each a packet of hooks.

The other group of 4-H members sent to the air pistol an air rifle area. Before starting the rounds of shooting, the leaders reminded the children of safety rules. They asked what "TAB" stands for and they discussed what "cease fire" means. Rev. Sherman even stressed safety to ask who can yell "cease fire." The answer was, of course, anyone can and should yell "cease fire" if necessary.

After the safety rules were reviewed and the shooter familiarized themselves with the equipment, they were allowed to shoot off two rounds of five shots each. After each set, the children retrieved the targets and they were scored. Most did pretty good at the target shots

All did great at the safety rules. John Sherman threw his hat into the firing range during the firing and Mark Musser called for "cease fire."

Above all, the fun that is had, safety is taught and is learned.

When both groups finished separately, they joined together to meet by the camping equipment. They discussed different types of tents and he ease of which some went up. They were shown different types of backpacks and were told the different uses of each and of their construction.

The members were given hiking safety rules in which leader Debbie Musser talked over with them. The members were given ideas on what should be taken on different kinds of hikes. They were told of the importance of water and proper ways to deal with garbage as well as fires.

Leaders Tim and Debbie Musser, Larry and Majorie Winkler, and John Sherman talked a lot about safety.

Franklin County junior 4-H dairy club members receiving project book awards for the 1998 project year were, from left, Melinda Cordell, Chambersburg; Daniel Oliver, Greencastle; Timothy Frantz, Waynesboro; Matthew Reichard, Waynesboro; Kirsten Reed, Chambersburg; and Amanda Wilhide, Waynesboro. Those not present to receive their award were Emily Stuff, Mercersburg; Emily Stoner, Mercersburg; Aaron Horst, Chambersburg; and Amy Haldeman, Greencastle.

4-H HAPPENINGS

The June dairy baby sponsored by the Sun area dairy princess promotion committee is Nicole Ashley Inch born to Kimber and Diane Inch, Sunbury, at 1:10 a.m. on June 1, at the Lewisburg Evangelical Community Hospital, Lewisburg.

In honor of June dairy month, Sun Area Dairy Princess, Lisa Heimbach, Mt. Pleasant Mills, and chairperson of the committee, Linda Fisher, presented Nicole Ashley and her parents a basket of dairy products from the committee and local businesses.

The Sun Area Dairy Princess, Lisa Heimbach, Linda Fisher, chairperson of the Sun Area Dairy Princess and Promotion committee met with Snyder County Commissioners Greg Shambach, Robert Reigle, and David Voss to proclaim June Dairy Month. In observance of the event, milk punch and cheese were served at the Snyder County Courthouse by the committee.

ANSWER — For Nancy Wallace, Lancaster, who wanted the address for Niagara lounge chair service, Charlotte Hoffman, Spring Grove, sent in this address. Belle Clark Sales Inc., 809 Sherman Place, Utica, NY 13502. Phone 1-800-376-0055. The company sends service people to repair the chairs.

ANSWER — Donna Morrison, Dalmatia, wanted to purchased the book series written by Thornton Burgess and illustrated by Harrison Cady. Thanks to M. Leaman who writes that if Donna wants the original books, she will need to search used book stores, but if she simply wants to read the stories to children, most of the paperback series with at least some of the illustrations are available from Dover Publications, Inc. 31 E. 2nd St., Mineola, NY 11501. Ask for complete catalog 59069-0.

ANSWER — Robert Peterson, Hubbardsville, N.Y., wanted to know where to purchase a small quantity of new plastic bottle caps for half gallon glass milk bottles. Thanks to Frank of NorView Farms, King of Prussia, who writes that plastic bottle caps can be purchased from Girton-Oakes-Burger, Third St. P.O. Box 901, Millville, PA 17846. Phone 1-800-233-8957.

ANSWER — A reader at one time sent instructions to make an ant killer mixture using boric acid and sugar. Mary Bowles, Red Lion, cannot find boric acid. Where can she purchase it? Thanks to Deanna Cunfer, Lehighton, who writes that Mule-Team Borax is located in the laundry detergent section of supermarkets. For those who want the recipe, here is is: Mix equal parts of sugar and Borax. If in a pinch, sprinkle straight Borax on the nest of carpenter ants.

Penn State Offers Watershed Managers, Landowners, Handbook On Aquatic Plant Control

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Controlling the growth of unwanted plants on dry land is hard enough, but when it comes to eliminating plants in aquatic environments, it's best not to wade in until you know what you're doing.

Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences has provided solutions to such problems by publishing "Pond Management & Aquatic Plant Control," a 22-page booklet containing tips on pond management, plant control alternatives, chemical herbicide dosage guides, and a photographic guide to common aquatic plants.

The $4 publication is a collaborative project between Penn State's Pesticide Education Program and the Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission.

"Almost all aquatic plants are useful and even beautiful," said Mark Hartle, a scientist in the commission's division of environmental services. "Aquatic plants become weeds when they make it difficult to use the pond, stream, or lake."

According to Winand Hock, Penn State professor of plant pathology and director of the pesticide education program, the booklet is an effective introduction to pond management that provides detailed information on the control and use of chemical herbicides in aquatic environments.

The booklet addresses several pond construction issues, such as water sources, soil composition, optimum depth, and degree of bank slope away from the shoreline.

Pond maintenance issues, such as burrowing rodents, nutrient management, runoff from sewage systems or golf courses, and dredging are discussed briefly.

The publication offers detailed information, including color photographs, of most of the water plants common to Pennsylvania. Each plant is classified into one of four categories: algae, submerged aquatic plants, emergent plants, and floating plants.

Recommendations for pest management alternatives are discussed, including the advantages and disadvantages of physical or mechanical controls, biological controls such as plant-eating fish and chemical controls.

The section on chemical controls outlines state permit requirements, including all specific information required for the permit. The section also details how to determine the correct chemical dosage and how various pesticides work to kill or eliminate plants.

Finally, the booklet lists which chemical controls are commonly used on algae, submerged aquatic plants, emergent plants and floating plants.

"Pond Management & Aquatic Plant Control" is available for $4 from your county Penn State Cooperative Extension office or by calling the College of Agricultural Sciences Publications Distribution Center at (814) 865-6713.

.Zeneca, Japan Tobacco To Form Joint Venture In Rice Biotechnology

WILMINGTON, Del. — Zeneca Agrochemicals and Japan Tobacco Inc. announced that they have signed an agreement to form a 50:50 joint venture in rice biotechnology which will bring together the expertise and technological strengths of both parties to research and then develop new rice varieties. The venture is scheduled to be established later this year with 100 million yen capital.

The research program, which will be based in Shizuoka, Japan, will have close links with Zeneca's agricultural research centers at Jealott's Hill (UK), Leiden (NL) and John Innes Centre at Norwich (UK). Research will focus on improved quality and yield, as well as on input traits such as disease and insect resistance. A separate joint venture will be set up to commercialize inventions from the research program.

Zeneca's principal research targets in agricultural biotechnology are the major cereals — maize, wheat and rice. These drive global food production and represent around 60 percent of the projected world biotechnology market.

Dr. David Evans, research and development director, Zeneca Agrochemicals, said, "Japan Tobacco expertise in rice biotechnology coupled with Zeneca's skill in bioscience will result in a global center of research excellence. The work done in rice biotechnology will also contribute to Zeneca's research in other cereal crops such as maize and wheat."

WEDNESDAY - 4 BAY BARN w/LOFT

Sandy loved auctions because Sandy loved bargains. I met her over 30 years ago when Kristin and I purchased the old Magee Mill a quarter mile down the Ironstone from the old Gresh place where she lived. Her keen interest in local history propelled her toward the hand wrought artifacts of this locale. Into her barn she stuffed bargain antiques that needed attention. Most of them still do! Also stored there were almost antiques that required a scientifically balanced environment of dust, dampness & pigeon doo to be properly aged. Sandy then added the one essential human ingredient: benign neglect. This patient, gradual process has been completed and these items are now ready for market! Benches, church pews, buggy seats, crates, boxes & barrels. Old green hanging screened pie safe. Bellows table, lobster trap, mantel, stoneware & redware, tub rack, fancy iron school desk, old prints & frames, round bird cage, lamps & lanterns, primitive butcher block, Boyertown beer case. Full case Neuweilers, country stands & tables, strawberry box carrier, green kero jug, cobalt bottles, milk bottles, plank high chair, biscuit boxes, farm bell, china closet, bear banks, corn cracker, bee equipment, crock shelves. Iron butcher kettle, churns, wire egg baskets, tool boxes, fancy "Hope" parlor stove, laundry stove, Schnitzel bank, wagon jack, bucket bench, pigeon holes, spice cabinet, stools, stained glass panels, cupboard top w/glass doors, dovetailed blanket chest, work table w/drawer, old jam cupboard, folding drying racks, antique hardware, tramp art, candle box, Phillies cigar display, feed chest. Tools & equip. - John Deere 140 lawn tractor, yard & garden tools, table saw, etc.

SATURDAY - CONTENTS OF ANTIQUE SHOP.

Sandy turned the original two room, 18th century Gresh farm house into an antique shop that was open occasionally, and also served as a repository for her stock in trade. Hanging punched tin pie safe, drying racks, crock shelves & bucket benches, barn & buggy lanterns, dovetailed sorting box, Stahl pottery, flour bin, early baskets, brass bucket, spindle coat rack, farrier's box, tool trays & boxes, weather vane, hanging country store lamp, iron cookware, bison hat rack, cobbler's box, wooden utensils, primitive display shelves of all kinds, crocks & jugs, all kinds of antique tools, kero lamps, iron scare crow, tole boxes, tin cigar sign, lots of meat old cupboards & shelves made from crate wood. old red 16 pane store cupboard top. Tin kitchenware & gadgets, kero lamp parts, especially fluted milk glass shades, old hardware, tin fat lamp, local advertising, Dietz pole lantern, butcher hooks, 7 drawer jewelry stock cabinet, brass huckster scale, old green hanging cupboard, antique glass showcase, bitters bottles, drop leaf table, figural cookie cutters, tureen, dovetailed blanket chest, folding hat rack w/mirror, flat & sad irons, antique bow saw, etc., etc.

CONSOLIDATED NUTRITION, L.C.

Hey They're Only Heifers!

- They're only the end result of your breeding program
- In most herds they will only comprise 40% of the milking herd during their first lactation
- They're only a big part of herd's future
- And if you don't have them fresh between 22 and 24 months of age, they will cost you $2 to $3 per day through lost production and increased housing and labor expenses.

So If They're All of These Things...

Why not feed them one of the most technically advanced feeding programs available today?

CONSOLIDATED NUTRITION'S NEW UltraBALANCE™ REPLACEMENT HEIFER SYSTEM

A flexible program designed to provide optimal replacement heifer nutrition. This exciting new program includes:

CN proprietary sugar blend:

- Stimulates rumen development
- Stimulates appetite
- Increases Average Daily Gain
- Improved Feed Efficiency

Yeast Culture

- Stimulates dry matter intake
- Promote early rumen development
- All Plant Proteins

For those producers desiring greater growth rates, ask your Consolidated Nutrition representative about the Accelerated Growth Rate Program.

CONSOLIDATED NUTRITION, L.C.

It Could Take A Chicken To Lower Beef Feed Costs

WOOSTER, Ohio — Poultry manure could be just what the nutritionist ordered, at least for beef cattle. Ohio State University scientists say producers can use poultry manure as an alternative to soybean meal-based protein supplements for gestating and lactating beef cows and heifers on limit-fed high-concentrate diets.

Steve Loerch of Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center and graduate student Johnny Rossi said ruminants can efficiently use poultry manure as a protein supplement because it's relatively high in crude protein.

Poultry manure is much higher in nitrogen than manure of livestock species, and it's much more digestible, Loerch said. Cattle can convert this nitrogen to protein via the microbes that live in the rumen or first stomach.

"Basically, it looks almost like a high-quality potting soil," Loerch said. "There's little odor, it's very dry, and the cows like to eat it."

The scientists obtained poultry manure from DayLay Egg Farm, Inc. of West Mansfield, Ohio. The product was heated and dried through a composting process that essentially pasteurizes the material.

"We conducted several experiments with gestating beef cows and heifers to determine the efficiency of poultry manure versus a grain-based crude protein supplement. When limit-fed high-concentrate diets with grain supplements are compared with high-concentrate diets with poultry manure supplements, and hay diets, it's easy to see which is more economical," Loerch said.

An ad libitum (free choice) diet of hay costs $1.46 per day per cow. A limit-fed high-concentrate diet with grain based protein supplement costs $1.11 per day per cow. When the limit-fed diet is supplemented with poultry manure, however, feed costs drop to 82 cents per cow per day — a significant difference that could save producers money. (These daily feed costs were calculated with corn priced at $2.70 per bushel, hay at $80 per ton, supplement at $250 per ton, and poultry manure at $20 per ton.)

Loerch and Rossi also found that poultry manure could be used as both a protein and an energy source to partially replace corn in the high concentrate diets limit-fed to beef heifers in late pregnancy.

"Animals consuming diets with poultry manure supplements lost more weight during both gestation and lactation periods than their counterparts consuming grain-based protein supplements," Loerch said. "Producers could feed additional corn to these cows to equalize energy intake and still have a cheaper feed bill than the producer who's feeding a high-concentrate diet with grain-based supplements."

Loerch said protein supplements represent 25 percent to 30 percent of total feed costs, but only 15 percent of the total diet dry matter intake (DMI). If the ration consisted of at least 20 percent poultry manure, no additional mineral supplementation would be needed.

"Poultry manure was equally effective as a soybean meal-based supplement in providing supplemental crude protein and minerals to cows consuming high-concentrate diets," Loerch said. "The poultry manure treatment can reduce daily feed costs by 35 percent, and when fed at 41 percent of diet dry matter to gestating beef heifers, it's effective as both protein and an energy source."

Using poultry manure as a protein supplement is a feasible alternative, Loerch said. "Research shows it's appropriate for beef cows. And throughout the winter months when feed costs are high, poultry manure is an economical, nutritious way to provide protein to growing cattle."

Organic Certification Applications Available

PENNINGTON, N.J. — The Northeast Organic Farming Association of New Jersey (NOFA-NJ) has just released applications for the fall cycle organic certification for the 2000 certification year.

Farmers, market gardeners, greenhouse operators, and livestock producers interested in becoming certified organic should contact Henry Krzewinski, NOFA-NJ certification administrator, at (609) 737-6848 for program details and appliction ordering information.

Organic certification is available to growers with qualifying fields and practices. To qualify for certification, fields must have been free of synthetic fertilizers and pesticides, or other prohibited substances, for at least three years. Growing practices must meet organic standards that emphasize the restoration and maintenance of fertility and soil life.

Growers who are new to agriculture, have done no fieldwork or crop planning or are unfamiliar with the requirements of organic certification, may be asked to wait for the spring 2000 cycle to allow more time for preparation. Additional requirements are found in the "1999 NOFA-NJ Certification Standards and Procedures," available from NOFA-NJ and included in all application packages.

Rapid growth in the organic field has fueled demand from consumers, wholesalers, and farmers markets for independent, third-party grower certification.

NOFA-NJ offers area growers an opportunity to become certified by a local organization with a national reputation. NOFA-NJ is a private, not-for-profit organization offering certification services to organic growers in New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania. In addition to certification services, NOFA offers technical support to organic growers, publishes a quarterly newsletter, and conduct an annual conference.

Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc. Has A Heavy Duty KNIGHT

One day in 1949, a friend told Stan Knight, "I wish someone would make a spreader that would not break down with frozen manure." That challenge to the founder of Knight Manufacturing led to the Knight heavy duty manure spreaders that were soon on the market. The common focus of Knight spreaders to this day is that they are simple and rugged and designed to give many years of service.

Binkley & Hurst Bros. Has One In Stock For You!

ProTwin Features at a Box Spreader Price

Knight Hammer Design Impeller Shreds Manure For Even Distribution of Nutrients for Easier Incorporation Into Your Soil.

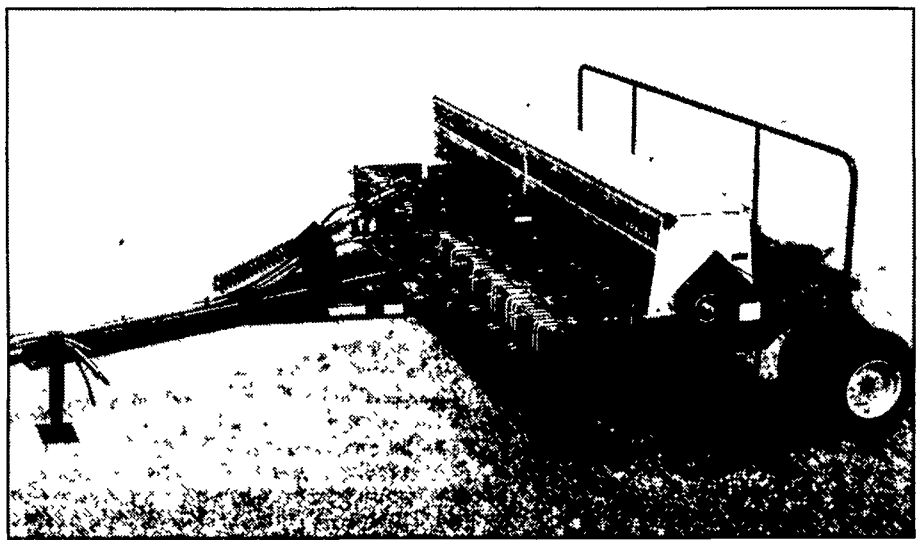
GET A NO TILL DRILL WITH AN ANYTIME, ANYWHERE ATTITUDE



Some No-Till drills work best when it's wet and soft; some best when the ground is dry and hard. Krause 5200 Series No-Till drills, however, work anytime, anywhere. With Krause 5200 Series No-Till drills, you get the precision depth control you need, regardless of the conditions. Krause 5200 Series No-Till drills let you seed at the proper depth when the ground is soft and they also penetrate in the tough, heat-baked soil of mid-summer. Four down pressure settings on each opener allow you to match opener down pressure to any field condition for precision seeding. The 16" no-till ripple coulters cause virtually no soil disturbance and can be used at all field speeds. The coulters also have an 8" trip height for protection against rock damage.

Compare with the Competition

- 13' and 15' Seeding Widths
- 2 bushel per foot hopper capacity
- Self-adjusting fluted seed cups
- Weight transfer hitch
- Staggered double-disc openers
- Excellent side hill stability
- Narrow transport - No wider than it seeds
- Exceptional road clearance
- Outstanding Price

YOUR RENT IS YOUR DOWN PAYMENT

"Hoober is the only dealer I know of, whether it's CASE, John Deere, or whoever, that will truly rent you a tractor on a monthly basis. And no one can touch Hoober when it comes to service. Also, if I decide to buy after renting, Hoober will apply the rent I've already paid and take that off the purchase price."

Dave Hernley
Manheim, PA

For a grain farmer like Dave Hernley, renting a tractor from Hoober makes good sense. Hernley rents a brand new tractor for two months out of the year, getting a powerful, reliable tractor backed by Hoober's outstanding service... an unbeatable combination. Allowing customers to rent tractors is unique to Hoober, Inc. and even better, all rent payments can be applied to the purchase of the tractor you rent.

But at Hoober, renting is only one way to get the tractor you need. You can choose a financing option that fits your budget. Hoober leases, rents and sells quality Case-IH tractors from 50-270 hp. As always, you get the power you require at terms you can afford plus Hoober's exceptional service to make sure your tractor will work as hard as you do. Call Hoober today and find out how easy it is to put yourself behind a tractor with the power and performance that's right for your operation.

CLAAS® Country
Meeting all your harvesting needs!

Chopping quality is extremely important for silage and also digestion of the feed. Sharp knives and a precisely adjusted shearbar guarantee a clean cut and even crop flow. Four intake and precompression rollers – two upper and two lower rollers – compress the crop densely and transport it to the chopping cylinder. The latest generation of metal detectors is located in the lower front roller. The gearbox provides for 6 different chop lengths. The changeover between two lengths in each range can be done at the touch of a button. The impressive CLAAS chopping cylinder on all JAGUAR models is a full 29.5" wide with 24 knives in V-formation gives 28,800 cuts per minute. The shearbar is adjusted to the knives without tools.

The result is ease of maintenance, with contact adjustment and a power saving cut, plus excellent forage quality.

The high quality of corn forage produced by the JAGUAR is derived from the CLAAS corn cracker. Two saw toothed rollers run at different speeds with 20% difference to open up virtually every kernel. This means good quality silage that is easily digested.

GEHL®

Cut Your Fields Down To Size!

Gehl swing-frames give you the capacity and maneuverability of a self-propelled mower conditioner at a pull-type price...plus the advantages of high-speed disc cutting technology.

- Nine disc cutterbar delivers 11-foot 7-inch cut.
- Wide conditioning rolls for uniform, fast drying.
- Full-width skid shoes protect the cutterbar.
- Simple drive system for more reliability.
- Change from windrow to swath in seconds - without tools.

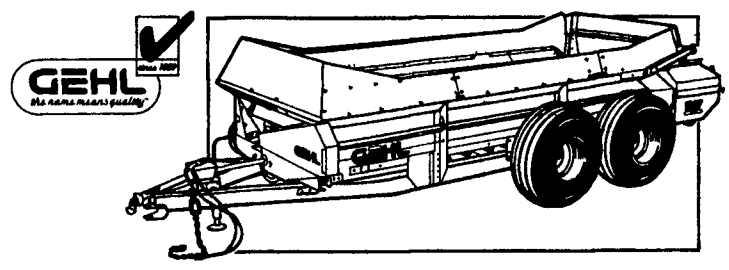
One Tough Box Spreader



Gehl Box Spreaders deliver outstanding performance in a variety of materials. Available in four sizes to match your operation.

- Excellent spread patterns in a variety of materials
- 12-year warranty on sides and floor
- High-density polyethylene flooring is virtually indestructible
- Options include: hydraulic remote control, hydraulic drive, hydraulic endgate and liquid side extensions.

STRIVING TO PROVIDE TOP QUALITY USED EQUIPMENT

She just freshened - How long until she reaches her peak?

Reduce the chance of milk fevers and DA's by targeting each ration to each group of cows. The NDA Vertical Mixer will allow you to cut and blend long-stemmed hay (large or small, round or square bales) with all other feed stuffs, making a palatable, easily digestible ration for your just-fresh cows. By starting with lots of hay in the mix, then gradually reducing the hay until they are on full feed, you will get them to peak production faster, and improve your bottom line.

Class leader

The New Holland "575" square baler tops every baler in the 14x18-inch bale class... for capacity, bale quality and reliability.

- Revolutionary rotary feeding system. Mechanically simple, but unbeatable for hay handling.
- Exclusive Wide Super-Sweep™ pickup that's 75" wide to get all the hay.
- Heavy-duty materials in the bale case and plunger
- Gear-driven knotters or twisters.
- Increased load capabilities handle extra capacity.

See us for the New Holland "575" square baler.

Built for the long haul

The New Holland Model 185 is a spreader you won't buy too often.. because it's going to be with you for a long time.

Here's why.

- Corrosion-resistant steel sides
- Indestructible plastic floor boards (HDPE)
- 12-year guarantee for FREE floor and sides if they fail

The Model 185 carries a 287-bushel load with ease. We'd like to show you why this is the best-selling spreader in its class.

BACS Employee To Conduct Assessments

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — William (Bill) J. Rogers of Brubaker Agronomic Consulting Service (BACS) has been certified to conduct assessments under the On Farm Odor/Environmental Assistance Program by the National Pork Producers Council.

Applicants must complete training, pass an exam, and agree to abide by the National Pork Producers Council Code of Ethics.

The On-Farm Program establishes inspection teams of specialists in environmental management, soil and water resources and engineering and other sectors, including university recommendations that, if implemented, improve the farms' environmental and odor success.

The program is checkoff funded, confidential, open to any kind and size of operation, and voluntary. The council's goal is to have 80 percent of pork production operations assessed in two to three years. By having the assessments and identifying and fixing problems, producers are verifying technologies that producers can implement in the future that will make pork production environmentally sustainable.

Massey Ferguson Introduces New Tractors

ATLANTA, Ga. — Massey Ferguson has introduced six new MF 6200 Series full-featured tractors from 75 to 120 horsepower designed for high performance and operator comfort in planting, tillage, loader and haying operations.

"In 1995, our new MF 6100 Series tractors received awards in North America and Europe and for their innovative design and performance. Our new 6200 series tractors take technology to the next higher level with new engines, new transmissions, new productive features, more models and new styling," said John Sargeant, Massey Ferguson product marketing manager.

"The wide choice of sizes, standard and optional features, wheels and tires, and attachments make it easy for customers to match these tractors to many different applications and needs," said Sargeant.

The 75 hp MF 6245 high-visibility tractor features a steeply slanted hood for excellent forward visibility and a glass panel Visi-Roof for greatly improved high forward visibility in front-end loader operations. Both features are optional on other selected MF 6200 series models.

Engines, cooling systems, drive trains and hydraulic systems are matched to tractor size and horsepower to maximize efficiencies through the transmission and deliver up to 90 percent of their engine horsepower to the wheels and PTO. With more engine power available as "useable power," everyday tractor operations are more productive and efficient.

MF 6200 Series tractors feature new Perkins four- and six-cylinder Fastram™ combustion technology that improves air swirl in the cylinder head to convert more fuel into productive horsepower. Fastram design improves engine life and efficiency while reducing noise and emissions to meet environmental standards.

New MF 6265 tractor (96 PTO hp), is one of six new Massey Ferguson 6200 Series tractors, 75 to 120 PTO hp, designed for high performance and operator comfort in planting, tillage, loader, and haying operations.

MF 6200 Series tractors feature the proven and efficient MF Dynashift transmission with 32 forward and 32 reverse gears for unmatched flexibility in choosing a gear to match varying field conditions. An optional DynaShuttle transmission is available to provide fast clutchless forward and reverse direction changes by simply moving the shuttle lever located next to the steering column. No clutching is required, making the power shuttle ideal for loader applications or any operation requiring frequent changes in tractor direction.

A high capacity electronic 3 point hitch (ELG) features an MF® digital system that responds faster to changing conditions for the most precise, fingertip control of implement operations. The 3 point hitch system is matched to each tractor's size and horsepower and offers fully integrated and automated functions for quick soil engagement, sensitivity adjustment, and rate of drop.

An Active Transport Control feature automatically senses the weight of any implement being carried on the linkage and smooths out "bounce" for a smoother, safer ride when equipment is being transported.

An electronically controlled independent PTO is standard on all 6200 series tractors and PTO speeds can be changed from 540 to 1000 rpm with an interchangeable drive shaft. A fully-protected Economy PTO is also standard and achieves rated PTO speeds at lower engine rpm. The Economy PTO reduces engine wear, fuel consumption and noise for lower operating costs and increased operator comfort.

New 4WD front axles are sized to the horsepower of the tractor and are capable of handling heavy loads and tight turns. The front axles provide a full 55 degree steering angle and 22 degrees of oscillation to maintain maximum ground contact without tilting the tires during tight turns.

Rear axles and final drives are matched to tractor horsepower and workloads to increase reliability, performance and value. Axle housings are designed to allow easier service access to critical components such as PTO drive clutches and hydraulic pumps.

Massey Ferguson's unique Autotronic™ system, standard on all 6200 series models, protects and controls a number of the transmission, four-wheel drive, differential lock and independent PTO functions.

KRAUSE

At the 200,000th tillage unit celebration were Steve Krause, president, on left, and Norman Krause, chairman of the board.

Krause Surpasses Manufacturing Milestone

HUTCHINSON, Kan. — At a time when takeovers, mergers, and buyouts are capturing headlines worldwide, Krause Corporation, headquartered here has surpassed a milestone in farm equipment manufacturing.

After 83 years in continuous business as a family-owned company, Krause recently manufactured and released its 200,000th tillage unit. Ironically, that figure doesn't even include Krause grain drills, which were introduced in 1983, or products built for the solid waste industry by the company's K-PAC division. Nor does it include add-on components, such as the finishing harrows that are offered as optional equipment on many tillage units.

To put that number into perspective, 200,000 tillage units lined up side-by-side would be enough disc harrows, chisel plows, field cultivators, and disc rippers to reach from St. Louis to Denver.

"We believe it is even more significant that this milestone was reached during a downturn in America's economy," said Steve Krause, president of the company and third generation CEO. "It serves as a reminder to our dealers, customers, and our own employees that we are seriously committed to agriculture and to the future of this company."

As Krause explains, the long march toward 200,000 units actually began back in 1916 when his grandfather, Henry Krause, who farmed in Meade County, Kansas, at the time, developed the industry's first one-way plow. The Krause implement was particularly unique in that it was suited for primary tillage in wheat stubble, yet it left enough residue to protect topsoil from high winds.

Unlike traditional disc plows, which had each disc blade mounted on a single standard, the one-way used multiple discs mounted at an angle on a single tie rod. As a result, it could handle tall weeds and stubble without plugging and still cover twice as many acres in a day as a regular plow.

By 1928, the demand for the company's one-way plow was so great that Krause bought a small windmill factory in Hutchinson, Kan., and moved the operation to its present location. Despite hard times in the 1930s and 1940s, when the Depression and World War II hit the company with a one-two blow, Krause not only survived, but prospered.

However, just as farming practices changed in the early part of the century, so did they change again in the late 1950s. Krause followed by becoming a leader in the tandem disc harrow market. At the same time, the company was starting to build a reputation for its rugged line of chisel plows and field cultivators.

By the 1960s, Krause was again setting industry standards, starting with the first high-residue chisel plow in 1962 and the first Flex-Wing hydraulic folding disc harrow in 1965.

"There were a number of years that we couldn't keep up with the demand," said Krause. "But because of his experience during the early 1950s, my father, who was managing the business by that time, was determined not to grow the company any faster than internal capital could be generated."

It turned out to be a good move for everyone. The company grew slowly, but steadily, while improving its capital base and net worth. It also put Krause in a position to adapt to the changing market of the early 1980s when farmers' needs were again changing. This time, the need was for combination tools that combined discing, field cultivation, and finishing into a single pass. Krause answered the call with the Landsman 3100 Series.

Today, farmers throughout the United States and Canada have even more soil finishing options, including the 6300 Series Landstar and the 6150 Series Landsman XT both designed for high-residue, minimum-till farming. Krause's growing fall tillage line includes the Landbuilder 4880 Series disc ripper, and the 4800 Series Landsaver and Landking coulter and disc chisels. Of course, disc harrows continue to dominate the product line with nine different series to match individual needs. Other products in the current line include seedbed packers, chisel plows, field cultivators, row-crop cultivators and a wide offering of conventional and no-till grain drills — including the 5500 Series, which is the industry's first grain drill with vacuum metering.

"We're proud to say that with 27 different series of agricultural tillage tools and grain drills, we currently have the largest offering of products of any short-line company in business," Krause said. "However, even though we have become a leader in innovative tillage and planting equipment, we will continue to look for ways to enhance farmers' productivity and improve farm profits.

"We see the farmers of the future using all three tillage systems — conventional, minimum till and no till," he said. "We're also confident that good farm managers will use a carefully planned combination of all three systems, applying each one where it fits best. The key is to make every pass count and to reduce operating costs by decreasing time, labor and/or fuel."

However, one lucky farmer will have an opportunity to save even more on his operating expenses. To celebrate their 200,000th unit — which is a 24-foot-wide Model 3954WR Flex-Wing disc harrow, that has been outfitted with commemorative graphics and a special serial number plate — Krause Corporation is doing more than just rolling the shiny new model out the door and cutting a ribbon. They're going to be giving the commemorative unit away in a drawing this fall.

To enter the drawing for the special Model 3954WR disc harrow, qualified individuals may fill out an entry form at their local Krause equipment dealer or any of the upcoming farm shows where Krause has a display. In addition, the commemorative disc harrow will be on display at Husker Harvest Days, the Ohio Farm Science Review and the Farm Progress Show.

According to company president Steve Krause, a drawing to determine the winner will be held following the Farm Progress Show in Amana, Iowa. "This company has been through good times and bad over the last 83 years and 200,000 units," Krause said. "This is just one way we can say 'thank you' to all the farmers who have supported us through three generations of Krause employees.

Dairy Producers To Tour Farms During World Dairy Expo

MADISON, Wis. – Bou-Matic, a company of DEC AgriTec, Madison,Wis., has announced that it will host a tour of area dairy farms during the 1999 World Dairy Expo in Madison this fall.

The 1999 Bou-Matic Hometown Dairy Tour offers dairy producers the opportunity to spend a day visiting three dairy installations in the Madison area as well as touring the Bou-Matic manufacturing plant.

"We hope to give the visiting dairy producers a wider focus for their visit to World Dairy Expo" said Dick Potter, executive director of sales, Bou-Matic. "By touring the dairy farms and the Bou-Matic plant, dairy producers will get to see the practical side of much of the information presented to them at World Dairy Expo."

Starting from the World Dairy Expo grounds at 7 a.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 29, the attendees will first visit the Bou-Matic manufacturing plant for a tour and continental breakfast.

The first dairy farm on the tour is a Bou-Matic double-8 Grand Prix parlor installed at the end of a stanchion barn at Stoffel Brothers This parlor provides an excellent model for dairy producers interested in a remodel installation. Box lunches will be provided while on the way to the next dairy.

Kratz Farms, home to a Bou-Matic double- 16 Xpressway parallel parlor, is the second stop on the tour. This brand new basement parlor is fully automated. A milk and cookies refreshment break is planned at the completion of this dairy visit.

The final dairy on the tour is Gehl Dairy, a Bou-Matic 40 cow Daytona rms-x outside rotary parlor. This is a brand new dairy installation - milking is set to begin in September.

A cocktail reception and dinner in Madison will provide an opportunity for the attendees to talk in an informal atmosphere and ask questions of various dairy industry leaders. Transportation to the World Dairy Expo grounds will be provided following dinner.

The price of $50 per person includes the dairy and plant tours, a continental breakfast, box lunch, cookies and milk, cocktail reception and dinner, transportation from World Dairy Expo to the farms and plant, and a season pass to the 1999 World Dairy Expo.

Contact Ann McDonald at Bou-Matic, (608) 222-3484, or by e-mail at annmcdonald@boumatic.com to register for the 1999 Bou-Matic Hometown Dairy Tour. Space is limited. Registration must be received by 5 p.m., Aug. 13.

Cecil County To Host Old Time Farm Days

ELKTON, Md. — The Cecil County Fair will be hosting the third annual Old Time Farm Days at the fairgrounds on Saturday and Sunday, July 24 - 25.

The fairgrounds are located in northern Cecil County just east of the Fair Hill intersection of Maryland routes 273 and 213.

The festivities will begin on Friday evening, July 23 at 6 p.m. with a horse pull followed by the classic tractor pull (for tractors built between 1960 and 1972). Antique tractor pulls (for tractors built prior to 1960) will be held on Saturday at 1 p.m. and at 8 p.m. All of the tractor pulls will be held in the main arena.

At 7 p.m. on Saturday, there will be a parade of antique farm equipment in the lower field.

Featured, on both days, will be antique tractors, cars, and stationary engines as well as steam and horse drawn equipment and demonstrations. Sunday's activities will include slow tractor races and other events and demonstrations.

Contact Don Moore at (410) 620-0275 or Jerry England at (410) 658-3348 or (410) 658-2121 for more information.

Governor's Proclamation Honors Simmental Juniors

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Kansas Governor Bill Graves has declared the week of July 19-23 as American Junior Simmental Association (AJSA) Week.

That's when more than 300 junior members of the American Simmental Association (ASA) will gather in Hutchinson, Kan. for the organization's National Classic XIX. Delegates are expected from more than 30 states.

"We deeply appreciate Governor Graves' thoughtful act," said ASA Executive Vice President Dr. Jerry Lipsey. "Our membership is looking forward to sampling the hospitality for which the state of Kansas is well known."

The National Classic is traditionally the highlight of the AJSA year. ASA staff members are working closely with the Kansas Simmental Association (KSA) along with staff from Kansas State University and Hutchinson Community College.

The Ramada Inn Convention Center in Hutchinson will serve as the Classic Headquarters, while all cattle events will be centered at the spacious, modern Kansas State Fairgrounds.

Contestants will participate in junior and senior divisions. Competition is held in a variety of cattle-related categories, including a herdsman's quiz, sire summary quiz, beef bowl, public speaking, sales talk, heifer exhibition, showmanship, advertising and promotion, and job interviewing. Extracurricular activities on the schedule include a dance, a volleyball tournament, a steak cookout, a festive awards banquet, plus sight-seeing tours, a cow "lotto," a trade show, and a cattle display.

Association Releases Simmental Sire Summary

BOZEMAN, Mont. — The American Simmental Association (ASA) has released its Spring 1999 Sire Summary.

"This Summary is based upon millions of performance records accumulated over more than 30 years," said ASA Executive Vice President Jerry Lipsey. "It is an up-to-date, highly accurate measurement of Simmental and Simbrah cattle."

In all, 85,913 bulls were evaluated by the ASA, working with the Animal Breeding Group at Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y. The summary contains data and the corresponding expected progeny differences (EPDs) published on 2,840 Simmental bulls and 267 Simbrah sires.

The spring summary represents the fourth official run of the innovative multiple breed international cattle evaluation (MB-ICE) system, which provides comparisons among all animals in the database regardless of their fraction of Simmental breeding.

The data bases from the American and Canadian Simmental Associations have been combined to produce a single international cattle evaluation, allowing animals in both herdbooks to be directly compared.

For a copy of the Spring '99 Sire Summary, contact ASA at 1 Simmental Way, Bozeman, MT 59715. ASA may be reached by telephone at (406) 587-4531, by fax at (406) 587-9301, or by e-mail at simmental@simmgene.com.

Poultry Meeting Set

OCEAN CITY, Md. — Close to 600 poultry industry personnel from across the country and around the world are expected to attend the Oct. 20 - 22 National Meeting on Poultry Health and Processing here.

Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI), the trade association working for the continued progress of the Delmarva Peninsula's 1.63 billion-a-year poultry industry, sponsors the meeting.

"Our meeting, now in its 34th year, is unique in that it brings together poultry health, live production, processing, and food safety personnel to hear presentations that provide practical information to the poultry industry," said Dr. Spangler Klopp, meeting chairman. DPI's Poultry Health Committee and Processing and Food Safety Committee selected speakers from 10 states and the District of Columbia.

In the combined session to open the educational portion of the meeting on Oct. 21, speakers will discuss various topics related to food safety.

Poultry health sessions include presentations on the relationship between environmental practices and poultry health, updates on several poultry health challenges, reports on chicken health throughout the nation, and trends in research.

In the processing session Oct. 21, speakers will present information on water use and recycling, the impact of environmental regulations on food safety requirements, improving the microbiological profile of poultry products, product recall procedures, and worker safety and health issues.

For more information about the 34th National Meeting on Poultry Health and Processing, contact Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc., R.D. 6, Box 47, Georgetown, DE 19947-9575; fax (302) 856-1845; telephone (302) 856-9037; or send via e-mail to dpi@ce.net.

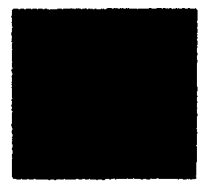
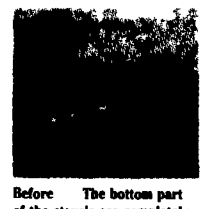
WARNING! DETERIORATING CONCRETE FROM CORN JUICE!
WARNING, ALL SILO OWNERS
Check your silo now for rotten staves. If you have been using your silo for 10 to 15 years for either corn silage or haylage, it is time to SHOTCRETE
RESURFACES INTERIORS:
• Coats the silo's interior
• Protects feed in storage
• Durable, tough, acid-resistant
• Increase useful life
• Economical

Before The silo's interior with plaster damaged and stave exposed

After The surface is reconditioned, and a new, thick tough surface will protect stored feed
REPAIRS HOLES:
• Repairs even large holes
• Up to twice the strength of the original stave
• Rapid application
• Durable surface

Before . A hole is worn completely through the silo wall


After . With the hole repaired by ShotCrete and a new surface applied, the silo is ready for years of use
EXTENDS USEFUL LIFE:
• Support for old foundations
• Special repairs can be made, quickly and economically
• Little or no forming needed
• Stronger than the original


Before The bottom part of the stave's are completely worn away

THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING YOUR FEED STORAGE!!

"HOW WILL YOU BE STORING YOUR VALUABLE FORAGES AND GRAINS IN THE 21ST CENTURY?

It's not too early to begin planning your storage and feeding systems for the year 2000 and beyond.

As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency; this can have as great an influence on PROFIT as milk price changes.

Protect your valuable feed's from the elements .. increase the efficiency of your feeds, your animals, and your labor.

Having Problems Getting Milk Cold?

Summer heat will soon be here. Plan now with a Mueller pre-cooler. It's an excellent way to lower the cost of cooling milk. It reduces milk temperature with water pumped straight out of your well. Mueller® precoolers are available in sizes to work with any system. If lower electric bills would make your life easier, call us and ask for more information on Mueller precoolers.

WE U.P.S. Daily

Attention
Dairy, Swine & Poultry Producers!
New Products Now Available...

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs. Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

GOLDEN PRO 46 XP
This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level

GOLDEN MEAL 40
An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorbtions

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL
A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications A natural alternative to animal fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations

To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans Keystone Mills announces its

Soybean Exchange Program

As manufacturers and distributers of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products. We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products

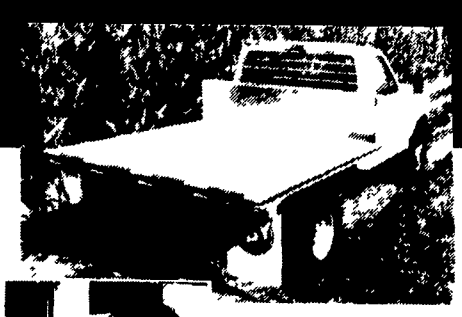
IN ALUMINUM BODIES
EBY BUILDS IT



M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in.

- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24', landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- LANDSCAPE BODIES - Lengths to 12', We'll build to your specs!

Let EBY custom build one for you.

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer customer options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business - building bodies to haul it is ours.

Lehigh County
42 Acre Farm

Nestled in a quiet valley overlooking the Lehigh River, this circa 1783 log/stone colonial farmhouse retains much of its original charm. House features a large living room with exposed logs, dining room with walk-in stone fireplace, ultra modern kitchen with knotty pine cabinets, three bedrooms, full bath, full attic, basement with large stone fireplace, and an enclosed side porch. The two modern barns are both built on monolithic concrete pads. The 36x75 barn would be ideal for horses, and the 40x130 free-span barn could be used for an indoor riding arena. Highlights include large spring-fed pond which is stocked with fish, beautiful panoramic views and a great private location just 20 minutes northwest of Allentown in North Whitetail Township, Parkland School District. It's ideal for horses, cattle, sheep or gracious country living. Price: $295,000

Dairyman Adopts Health Benefits Inherent In Grazing

ANDY ANDREWS

LOYSVILLE (Perry Co.) — Before the year that changed everything for Perry County dairyman Duane Hertzler — 1994 — his herd experienced health problems.

Cows were on concrete. Hoof problems were critical.

The cows were having trouble with feed.

And Hertzler looked at some of the things successful farmer/graziers were doing, trying to find an answer to his herd health problems.

With the changes in place, the following year began to pay off.

Because of the soil type and terrain, and the fact that during a drought year they get hard hit because of the Duffield limestone and shale combination, an area marked by shale ridges, corn didn't do as well.

When it was dry, corn for silage was almost nonexistent.

They found out that grazing, for the land they had to deal with, could be the solution.

Getting the cattle off the concrete and into the newly sown pastures proved better, according to Duane. Culling rate was 43 percent in 1993 and dropped the next year to 32 percent. In the best year since the changeover, culling dropped to 24 percent.

And with soil conditions, a little bit of rain provided swift rejuvenation of the pastures on the farm.

For his work Hertzler was awarded the past winter with the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council Outstanding Producer Award at the council's annual awards and educational conference in Grantville.

In addition to the corn for grazing, Hawley also planted a mixture of turnips and kale that will be grazed later this fall. He says he takes the "salad approach" to feeding his cattle. Farmers who would like to see how the new crops fit into a grazing program can come to the Hawley farm on Aug. 27 from 10-noon for a pasture walk. See story page 12. Photo by Carolyn Moyer

Duane E. Pysher

Last time I talked with you I was discussing the rain — and when I think about it that was probably the last significant rain we received. What a difference we are seeing out there today. It looks like August already.

The natural question comes up, "How do you handle this situation in a grazing system?"

There are several things to consider when dealing with drought conditions in a grazing system and I will discuss them.

Drought and its effect on a grazing system is not so different than what is occurring in a conventional farming system. When you think about it, corn, soybeans and the pasture, as well as most of the crops, are all drought stressed. The difference between the grazing and conventional systems lies within the management system.

When the forages have slowed down in their regrowth, we need to consider the management that we are applying to our grazing system. It is important that our management remains intense and perhaps gets even more intense.

We cannot at this point become lax and allow the forages to be overgraz-acres to bring the total farmed to 550. The all-registered Holstein herd also includes 15 Dutch Belted and one Jersey.

Hertzler still plants about 160 acres of corn, all silage.

About 270 acres are fenced in pasture. Some are used for silage and another 50 acres are baled for storage. Hertzler noted that he stores about 100 bales of grass.

Hertzler maintains about 100 acres in alfalfa, for a total of 240 acres in grasses. About 270 acres are in grazing mixes, including orchardgrass/white clover and some perennial ryegrass.

About 70 percent of the mix is in orchardgrass and 30 percent in clover. About a quarter of the acreage is in perennial ryegrass with a 25 percent combination of clover.

All alfalfa silage has orchardgrass in it, to the tune of 80 percent alfalfa and balanced with orchardgrass. He also grows about 50 acres of barley.

Year-round milking cows receive approximately 20 pounds of corn silage and varied amounts of haylage. Additional protein and energy feed sources are supplemented as required. Sources include soybean meal, cottonseed, roasted beans, shelled corn, and barley.

Since the changeover, the real payoff has been in the cost of feed. In 1993, feed cost was about $5.60 per hundredweight. In 1998, that figure dropped to $4.96 per hundredweight and $3.04 this year — proving that using pasture increases the bottom line of the dairy business.

Hertzler noted that 1998 was indeed the best year as far as feed cost per hundredweight. So far, 1995 was the worst year for profitability.

The cost has a tendency to come down, Hertzler noted. And since then, herd health has improved dramatically for the better.

What stands out at the Hertzler farm are the number of hills. "We feature more hills than other farms, which are harder to farm," he said. "We felt that in years lower in rain, grazing on our soils would do well."

With good growing conditions, and the right mix, grass can yield as much dry matter as corn. Grass can go through a summer dormancy with dry weather, but in 3-4 days after rainfall it can start growing again. Pastures provide an insurance against drought that can't be purchased with corn.

And the cattle are off the concrete and the milking is better, noted Hertzler.

Hertzler takes care of about 234 cows and notes how improvements in his operation allowed him to change philosophy, he said, about drought conditions and their effect on the herd.

Every 12 hours the cows receive a fresh feeding in the paddocks, laid out with polywire. The grazing areas are set up with a high-tensile wire. Size of the paddocks vary, according to amount of grass in the field and type of dairy animal.

Most of the time the animals are kept outdoors in the paddocks. They are moved inside only when it is really hot and, of course, at milking, at 3 a.m. and 3 p.m. Milking is with a double-7 herringbone.

Milking animals are grazed in new paddocks every 12 hours. Heifers are moved about every three to four days. The paddock, for heifers, varies in size, depending on grass height and number of animals.

For milking cows, grass height at grazing is 6-8 inches and about 10 inches for heifers. Paddock size depends on the amount of clover and other plants in the area used for grazing.

The paddocks are reseeded with clovers once every other year at about a pound per acre. Orchardgrass is reseeded where needed, "maybe every third or fourth year," Hertzler said. Some stands haven't been reseeded in six years.

The paddocks are clipped once a year. Sometimes they are clipped twice.

Fertilizer on the paddocks is liquid manure. The heifer paddocks are fertilized about three times in about six years.

They are also limed every three years out of six, he noted.

Soil tests are conducted regularly to determine nutrient needs.

First cutting was done on some fields from May 10-15 this year. The yield was fantastic — equalling 80 percent of last year's total yield because of the excellent conditions. Second cutting was conducted in mid-June.

"We made five cuttings last year," said Hertzler. "As soon as it rains, we should get a good second crop." Last year's last cutting was "fantastic," he said.

Corn yields vary. In 1998, all corn silage was about 18 tons per acre, a relatively good yield. Ten years earlier, in a terrible drought year, yield was 5-6 tons per acre.

The farm employs three full-time.

Neil works with the cows and overall milking, including the forages and cattle feeding, "anywhere he's needed," said Duane. Heather also helps out with various aspects of the farm.

Duane spoke about his dairy at this year's Franklin County Dairy Day in January. He also spoke at the Pennsylvania Grazing Conference in Grantville early this year. He enjoys sharing his grazing experiences at various farm meetings, such as soil and conservation or grazing conferences.

He noted, "Overall herd health is the driving force" at Moo-Echo Dairy. Using grazing has cut health costs, saved feed, and added up to an improved bottom line.

Hertzler continues to graze with top producers which can net 30,000 pounds or more of milk.

"I'm willing to use the technology in a blend with confinement and grazing systems," said Hertzler. "In considering our farming practices, we like to incorporate both confinement and grazing, and think that combination works well for us."

Now in his sixth year of grazing, he has seen enough of the positive aspects to continue to work on improved milking and overall profitability.

PFGC ❖ SPECIAL REPORT ❖

CHECK MOISTURE BEFORE BALING HAY

Baling hay at the optimum moisture content can be a tricky business, which often involves some guesswork and cooperation from the weather. Baling at moisture levels above the optimum will cause heating and spoilage of the hay. Conversely, baling at moisture levels below the optimum causes excessive leaf loss, which translates into lower quality hay. The optimum moisture for baling is not a constant and depends on the bale size being used.

Moisture for small rectangular bales should be no higher than 20 percent, unless a preservative is used. The upper moisture limit in large bales, both round and rectangular, is about 16 percent to avoid excessive heating during the storage. If large round bales are stored outside and uncovered, moisture content at baling can be up to 20 percent.

Determining moisture content can be done with a microwave oven or Koster moisture tester before baling, or an electronic moisture meter at baling. When using an electronic moisture meter, probe from the end of rectangular bales and through the rounded diameter of round bales. At least five probes of each bale should be taken and the readings should be averaged. If readings vary more than three percentage points, more probes should be taken and the average recalculated.

Many factors can affect a meter's accuracy such as bale density. Tightly packed bales will give the most accurate readings. The use of chemical preservatives is another factor that may affect the accuracy of electronic moisture meters. Some chemicals such as propionic acid can increase readings as much as four percentage points. If preservatives are used and the instruction manual for the moisture meter does not provide information about effects of chemicals on meter performance, contact the manufacturer for additional information.

PFGC ❖ PASTURE PONDERINGS ❖

ed. The plants are definitely stressed and overgrazing only makes it worse. In fact, if we do not have additional land to bring into grazing, we may need to consider pulling the livestock off the pastures and feeding them in a sacrifice paddock or in the barn.

Is this so different from what is occurring in the conventional system? The livestock in that system is being fed in the feedlot or barn. In a grazing system we would be expecting to feed them in the pastures at this time. We may have to buy feed in order to do that or start feeding back some of that surplus forage we produced and harvested this spring.

One of the main problems we need to overcome in a grazing system where the forage supply is dwindling is to rotate the livestock through the paddocks at a faster rate than you would normally, so as to reduce the amount of time they have access to a paddock to prevent overgrazing. The other way to prevent overgrazing is to give them a larger paddock to graze. Even better is not to graze at all, but supplemental feed in a sacrifice paddock or in the barn.

There is one positive we can find in a time of drought — we can graze that cutting of hay that is too short to be mechanically harvested. This type of flexibility is possible, if in our planning of our grazing system we provided for temporary fencing and watering facilities. We may even have corn or grain crops that are going to wither and die and not produce a crop that could be grazed. However, we need to consider the problem of nitrate poisoning when we do this, exercise proper precautions if you graze a corn crop. If you think that your forages could be high in nitrate, have them tested first before grazing.

Some graziers anticipate shortages and provide for that shortfall by planting animals such as brassicas, sorghum, or sudangrass. These crops have to be planned for in advance of a drought, and unfortunately it is so hard to anticipate a drought, so often times we do not have them when we need them. Therefore, unless you have extra land available and plan ahead, this option is not very viable in most cases. If you do have land available and want to plant some annuals to hedge for a drought, you can plant annual warm-season crops such as sorghum or sudangrass. You can also plant brassicas such as rape, kale, or turnips in the late spring for summer grazing.

Warm-season grasses also come into play in periods of hot and dry weather. However, they are suited for use with nonlactating dairy animals, beef cattle, or sheep. They are not acceptable for use with a lactating herd of dairy cows. If you could get them to eat the material, it is of too low a quality to make milk. However, with dry cows and heifers it can be a good source of feed for these dry, hot times.

The best warm-grass species suited to grazing in Pennsylvania is switchgrass and the best variety is cave-in-rock. There are also secondary uses of the warm-season grasses on the farm, for improving wildlife habitat and particularly for pheasants.

Another consideration we need to make during these hot, dry periods is being sure that there is adequate water available for the grazing livestock. This is a time when those average daily consumption rates of drinking water for livestock are often exceeded. Therefore we need to make certain that we have the ability to provide for this increased consumption. Water temperatures in the above-ground waterlines may get fairly high and having a larger trough or tank available is important.

We also have to consider animal comfort and provide a way for them to get relief from the hot summer sun. Having a wooded lot or shaded barnyard to turn them into is one way to provide relief. Another way is to allow them to return to a well-ventilated barn where fans provide an air flow to keep them cool. A misting system can also be provided as a cooling mechanism.

Dealing with shortages of forages during dry, hot weather, and providing for animal comfort, are critical items to deal with if we are going to be able to maintain our herds. Heat stress will take its toll on animal performance. We hope we can do a good enough job to at least minimize the losses.

If you need additional information or assistance on dealing with a drought, contact your local Natural Resources Conservation Service office, county cooperative extension, or conservation district office to get that help. You can also contact me at (717) 237-2221 or at NRCS, Suite 340, One Credit Union Place, Harrisburg, PA 17110-2993. Until next time, Happy Grazing!

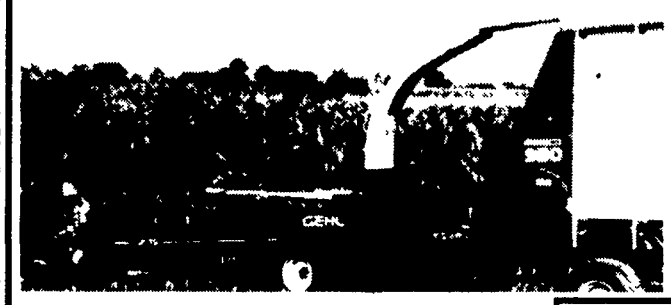
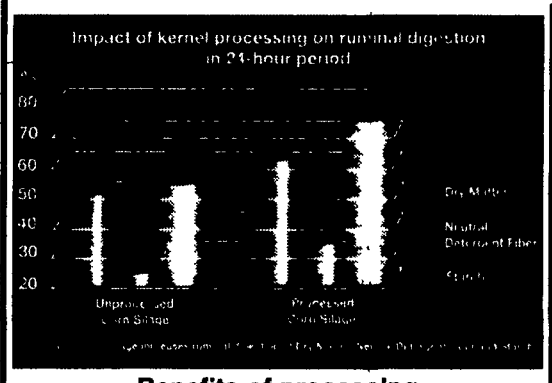
This Is A Good Time To Order A Kernel Crushing Forage Harvester From Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc.



We are introducing and now taking orders for the new medium size Gehl 1075 Forage Harvester with high speed crop processing roller mill that can be opened up for haylage without removal of unit.

The new medium sized Gehl Model CB 1075 is here with a easy-in, easy-out kernel processor. Lots of good features to make chopping enjoyable with the end result you are looking for - higher quality, more digestable feed.



Benefits of processing

The benefits of processed corn silage can easily outweigh the investment. Reports from dairy farmers who have already used a prototype model report increased milk production of two to four pounds per cow per day These results are confirmed by a recent Washington State University study that shows average responses of two to three pounds

Ed Rits
Natural Beef Producer
Honey Grove

For the second year in a row we had a 100 precent calf crop this spring. With adequate grass growth in May, the calves have added about 150 pounds of growth. June was quite dry with little or no growth the first 18 days.

We received 1½ inches of rain and pastures and hay fields turned green again. To let the pasture growth catch up, we fed round bale hay to the cow/calf herd for a week. During that week the pastures caught up. Now we are facing 95-degree, hazy, hot and humid weather. Cow conception may be decreased this year.

Our reseeding the three-acre winter dry lot was a great success. The bare spots were all green by April 15. On May 30 we grazed our cow/calf herd for three days and then clipped the residue. As I write, it's June 26 and it's ready to graze again.

On June 19, the PFAC board of directors had the opportunity to provide an American picnic for Kazakhstan dairy farmers and agribusiness people touring Pennsylvania and surrounding states with John Rodgers, a Belleville farmer. (See story next issue.) David and Janet Hileman hosted the picnic at their 420-cow dairy farm near Tyrone. The group also visited Wayne Harpster's Evergreen Farm to see round-the-clock milking and feeding.

By now all farmers should have all this first cutting of hay made. Second cutting should be almost complete when you read this column.

Did you make some high quality hay that you would like to compare with other Pennsylvania farmers?

If so, contact your county extension agent for an entry form to enter your sample in the Hay Show sponsored by PFAC at Penn State at Ag Progress Days, Aug. 17 - 19. What better way can you get scientifically determined feeding value of the forage you are feeding your livestock?

The annual PFAC picnic will be at Wayne Harpster's Evergreen Farm (Carter Bridge) on Wednesday, Aug. 18, at about 6 p.m. There is a notice elsewhere in Foraging Around. You are encouraged to register early so that the committee can be adequately prepared. Thank you.

Since our last column, Ed Koncle was elected president-elect of PFGC. Ed is sales manager for P.L. Rohrer in Smoketown. Their principal seeds are corn, soybeans, alfalfa, clovers, and many grass varieties. If they don't have what you are looking for, they may be able to locate it for you.

July Field Clinic Offers Crop Adviser Credits

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Certified Crop Advisers (CCAs) can obtain recertification credits at one of two Penn State-sponsored Agronomic Field Diagnostic Clinics on either Tuesday, July 27 or Thursday, July 29 here at the Russell E. Larson Ag Research Center.

According to Dwight D. Lingenfelter, assistant extension agronomist, new techniques and technologies round out the field days, featuring demonstrations on a variety of agronomic topics and overviews of existing practices and procedures.

Sessions range from agronomic crop diagnostic tools to drying forages. Topics on minimum till and corn and soybean diseases will be offered both days. Registration begins at 9 a.m. The program concludes at 4 p.m.

Producers can select five of six topics for the day, which offer a variety of credit equivalent units (CEUs) for the CCA and pesticide license credits.

Last year about 230 attended the event, about 115 each day, according to the extension agronomist. Cost for the event is $40 per person.

Most of those in attendance included industry representatives, including ag chemical industries, seed, and other suppliers, producers, and representatives from several state agencies, including the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection, county extension agents, and others.

The one-day field clinics are designed to improve the agronomic management skills of industry personnel, extension and public agents, crop consultants, and farmers. Specialists from Penn State and the agricultural community will provide hands-on diagnosis training in crop production, pest management, soil fertility, and soil and water conservation.

Participants can choose from a variety of topics and have ample opportunity to diagnose, solve, and discuss crop management problems and situations. In addition to gaining practical agronomic knowledge, CCA and pesticide applicator license credits can be obtained.

The program agenda includes an "Overview of Diagnostic Tools for Agronomic Crops" by Dr. Dennis Calvin, Penn State entomologist. According to Lingenfelter, Calvin, associate professor of entomology at Penn State, will address an array of tools used for crop management. Calvin will review insect scouting, soil pH kits, triazine-resistant weed test kits, the presidedress nitrogen soil test (PSNT) kit, and others. "He will hit the major hot spots," noted Lingenfelter, on identifying and managing pests of major agronomic crops. CEUs offered: 1.0 pest management (PM).

Also included will be "Toxic Principles of Livestock Forages" by Dr. David Wolfgang, field studies director of Penn State Veterinary Science. Wolfgang will examine several plant species toxic to animals, including symptoms of poisoning, and will examine naturally occurring mycotoxins in feedstuff, each from a forage standpoint. CEUs. 1.0 crop production (CP).

Dr. John Ayers, professor of plant pathology, will discuss various diseases of corn and soybeans. CEUs: 1.0 PM.

Dr. Marvin Hall, forage specialist with Penn State, will provide a discussion on "The Dynamics of Drying Forages In a Humid Climate." Alfalfa cut in different stages will be demonstrated, including an overview of the many factors involved in forage drying. Hall will speak about the principles of moisture movement in the plant stem and leaf and how moisture evaporates and diffuses. CEUs: 1.0 CP.

Lynn Hoffman, agronomist and tillage specialist, will overview "No-Till, Zone-Till, and Adaptations to Make the Planter Work Better." Hoffman will look at corn and how tillage can be adopted for certain applications, including demonstrations of different types of coulters and row cleaners. Hoffman, a senior research associate, will look at equipment additions to provide zone- and no-till cultivation. CEUs: 0.5 soil and water (SW) and 0.5 CP.

Finally, Dr. Doug Beegle, soil fertility specialist, will address "Water Movement In Agricultural Lands." He will look at a tilled area in a field demonstration, examine percolation rates, and how water travels down through heavy corn stalks compared to a relatively clean coverage area, among other topics. CEUs: 0.5 SW and 0.5 nutrient management (NM).

There will be a question and answer period during each presentation.

For more information, contact Penn State, (814) 863-7043 or call Lisa Crytser in the Department of Agronomy, (814) 865-2543.

Alfalfa Is For People, Too

Although alfalfa may not appear on anyone's top 10 list of favorite foods, the payload of protein, vitamins, and minerals that makes it such a great forage for animals also makes it food for people.

Bob Dollison, president of Leaf Nutrient, Inc., said alfalfa protein has done wonders for hundreds of undernourished Mexican children. Over the past decade, the charitable organization Dollison heads has made it possible for people in more than 100 poor rural villages in Mexico to extract protein from locally grown alfalfa and add it to tortillas, pasta, cakes, and other foods they customarily prepare.

Within a matter of weeks, Dollison said, children who regularly get supplemental alfalfa protein are noticeably more alert and begin to perform better in school. Adding just one tablespoon of alfalfa-juice concentrate to their food each day helps them grow and develop normally and decreases their susceptibility to communicable diseases, Dollison noted.

Two simple, low-cost machines invented by University of Wisconsin agricultural engineers are used to extract the protein. One is a hammermill-like device used to grind up whole, freshly cut alfalfa plants. The second is a hydraulic press that squeezes most of the juice out of the ground plant material.

Heating the protein-rich juice to 170 degrees for about 10 minutes removes the characteristic grassy taste and coagulates the protein and other nutrients. The coagulated material can then be used fresh or stored in either dried or frozen form.

The remaining pulp is fed to cattle. University of Wisconsin research has shown that the processing equipment breaks down the plant material more effectively than chewing. Even after the juice is removed, cattle get more nutrients from the pulp than they ordinarily would from unprocessed alfalfa.

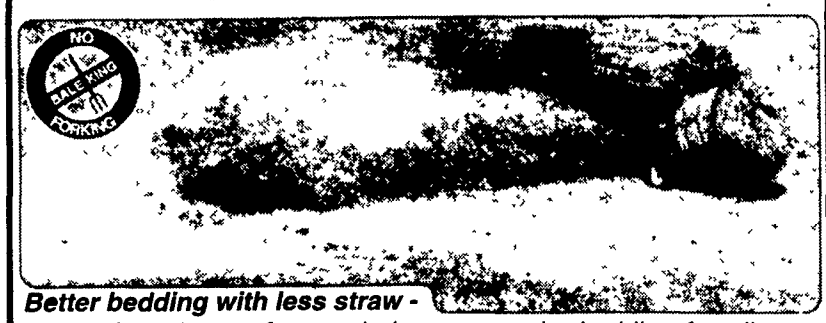
BALE KING

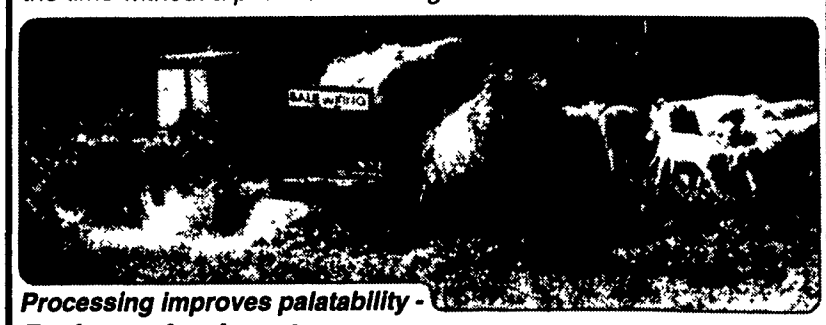
Give your entire herd all the advantages the dominant cows take!



Better bedding with less straw -

A uniform layer of straw helps ensure dry bedding for all your livestock, not just the boss cows. Your entire herd will be cleaner and more comfortable.

Bale King can also be used to spread straw inside poultry barns or blow straw into open front cattle shelters and calving huts as well as produce bedding for hogs. Fast, uniform spreading in a fraction of the time without a pitch fork or strings.



Processing improves palatability -

Reduces feed costs

Processing the bales makes it a lot easier for your livestock to feed. They will no longer have to pull and tear at a packed bale to get a bit of feed. They'll be able to feed faster and use less energy in feeding. Processed feed may improve feed conversion rates. There's also less waste. Many Bale King owners report feed savings of 20% or more.

'Salad' Approach To Forage Extends Grazing Season

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

MONTROSE (Susquehanna County) — "We farm a little differently here," says Louis Hawley as he grins about the changes and improvements he has made on his farm in the past 10 years. And, in making the switch from a conventional year-round dairy operator to a grazing, seasonal producer, he says he still has a lot to learn.

"There are beginner graziers and advanced beginner graziers around here. I say I'm an advanced beginner. A lot of graziers have spent considerable time establishing an inexpensive system and they haven't improved on that. They may be a beginner for six years. They haven't done any no-till seeding to change the pastures, they haven't changed their fertilization or lime program or their stocking rate. They designed a simple system, it's worked, and they haven't gone any further. I'm learning new things all the time," he said.

When talking to the Hawleys several things stand out. Perhaps the biggest is that they are willing to try new things.

That willingness to be different, coupled with an interest in preserving a rare species, sparked a curiosity for the Dutch Belted cattle that now graze among the Ayrshires, Jerseys, Holsteins, and crossbred animals in their herd.

"Longevity is one of the things that the Dutch Belted cattle are known for. In grazing herds a lot of times there are cows that are 12-15 years old," explained Hawley. "There are very few cows that are more than 6-7 years old in confinement herds. A lot of (my) cows are 10 years old, but they don't look it."

With 65 milking animals, Hawley estimates an average production of 40 pounds per cow with a bulk tank average of 3.6 butterfat and 3.1 protein percent right now. As the summer progresses and the cows are ready to be dried off, the components jump dramatically.

"We had an exceptionally nice milk check last fall with the high butterfat. It was just pluses all across. We had over $20 (per hundredweight) three months in a row and there was no feed bill out of it! Actually in the fall, the total dollars were about the same as it was with more milk in the spring."

Louis, Ben, and Mike Hawley farm "a little differently" in rural Susquehanna County. For the past 12 years, the Hawleys have shifted their focus from conventional farming to grazing and seasonal production. Here they stand by their recently completed loading chute, one of the many renovations the family has done to make the farm operate more efficiently.

Hawley estimates that he will start about 100 calves this year alone between the beef cows and the dairy replacements. Right now they have 30 calves on beef cows and 40 dairy replacements and they will start another batch of beef calves before the end of the year. They sell all of their dairy bull calves. When it's feeding time for the unweaned calves, Hawley needs only to dump a bucket of milk into his New Zealand style nipple feeders and the calves take care of the rest.

"That's probably the thing that saves me the most time of anything we've done," said Hawley when he talks about the addition of the specially designed feeders.

Although Hawley notes that with his seasonal operation the cows don't have to produce as much milk to cover the minimal expenses, he still confesses that it's not easy making ends meet as a farmer no matter what system you use.

"We're still struggling," he admitted.

With the shift to seasonal production, the Hawleys decided to move more capital from what they view as temporary expenses, to permanent improvements. Because they do relatively little crop work, they don't have to own a full line of equipment. They keep their haying equipment up to date and even have time to do some custom work for several neighbors. They also have fewer cattle related expenses than many conventional herds.

"We have no big feed bill, no vet bill, no DHIA fees, and no registration fees," said Hawley.

The goal on this farm is to let the cows harvest the majority of their own feed from April through early December. In the parlor, the cows are offered free-choice minerals, loose salt, and dry hay. Over the winter, the cows have access to hay all the time as they mill around a large covered round bale feed bunk that the Hawleys constructed as part of a major barnyard improvement project.

The project, which was partially funded through the Chesapeake Bay Program, included pouring concrete in the barnyard and holding area and erecting two manure storage facilities.

They also converted the barn from a 62-cow tiestall facility to a swingover parlor.

Because they did much of the work themselves, they were able to reduce the final cost of all the projects by a great deal. They also cut the parlor

(Turn to Page 14)

With a seasonal herd, the majority of the calves come in March and April. The Hawleys use nipple feeders to cut down the time that it takes to milk-fed 40 calves.

down to include only the necessary items. Because an outdoor wood furnace is used as a heat source for their water, they decided to lay pipes in the concrete to heat the parlor floor too, providing a perk at a minimal cost.

"In the winter, when we close the doors and have a fire burning, it's as warm in here as a house!" said Hawley.

Other ongoing improvements include spring developments and other water management projects, and they have built miles and miles of high-tensile fence.

"Our goal is to go around the whole farm," said Hawley. "We actually have more pasture than we need, but in a dry year, we have that cushion too."

The majority of the pasture consists of a mix of orchard grass, bluegrass and white clover. At times, they seed in red clover, but they've had limited success with that.

"Red clover's good feed, but we have a hard time keeping it. Some years are better than others," said Hawley.

The fencing project now covers much of the farm's 435 acres as well as some of the 400 plus acres that the Hawleys rent. From the furthest point of the fence back to the barn is a great distance.

"One of the arguments is, do we have to have cows go that far? If there was no feed at all on a cool day in the fall, I'm sure these cows would walk that far. They'll walk twice as fast to grass as they will walk back to the barn," Hawley said.

Although it has been 15 years since Hawley has planted corn on his farm, this year he broke out the plow and rented a planter to seed a 20-acre field of grazable corn, and a field of turnip and kale mixture. He hopes these additions will extend his grazing season into mid-December.

Water is often the limiting factor in grazing cattle. Here, Hawley has captured the water from an existing spring so the cattle can utilize it.

"This isn't corn country," declared Hawley, with the shallow soils and short growing season. "I think a lot of farmers in this area tried to follow the corn and alfalfa rotation recommended by Penn State and Cornell and the trials are done on a lot better ground. I think they would recommend a different

Silage Spreaders with a Heritage of Quality

Lancaster Level-Flo has been the leader in non-motorized silage spreaders for more than 25 years. Each spreader is specifically designed to meet the needs of the individual operator.

Choose the spreader that best matches the equipment you use to fill your silo.

The Model 1030 Multi-Flo® is our standard silage spreader. With a 9" gooseneck, it is designed for average capacity blowers and silo sizes.

The Model 1200 Multi-Flo® has a 12" wide gooseneck. Its larger size all but eliminates plugging problems, even when you blow in haylage. It is especially helpful in larger silos.

The BlueMax® is built for those who push high-capacity silo filling equipment to the limit. All parts of the BlueMax® subject to wear are made 25% heavier - and the stainless steel plate is twice as heavy. For strength, there are reinforcements all around. Even our well-known non-binding hinge is heavier.

PFGC ❖ SPECIAL REPORT ❖

PROPER ADJUSTMENTS OF HAY CONDITIONS REDUCES DRYING TIME

Hay producers in Pennsylvania list unpredictable weather as the number one reason for not being able to make quality hay. However, the amount of time that hay lays in the field and is exposed to rain can be shortened without additional cost to the farmer.

Before farmers go to the hay field with their mower-conditioner, they should spend a few minutes adjusting it. Many conditioners have not been adjusted since they were bought and this could be costing the farmer thousnds of dollars per year in hay quality and production.

The conditioner crushes or crimps the stem of alfalfa and speeds up drying. Properly adjusted conditioners can cut drying time in half!

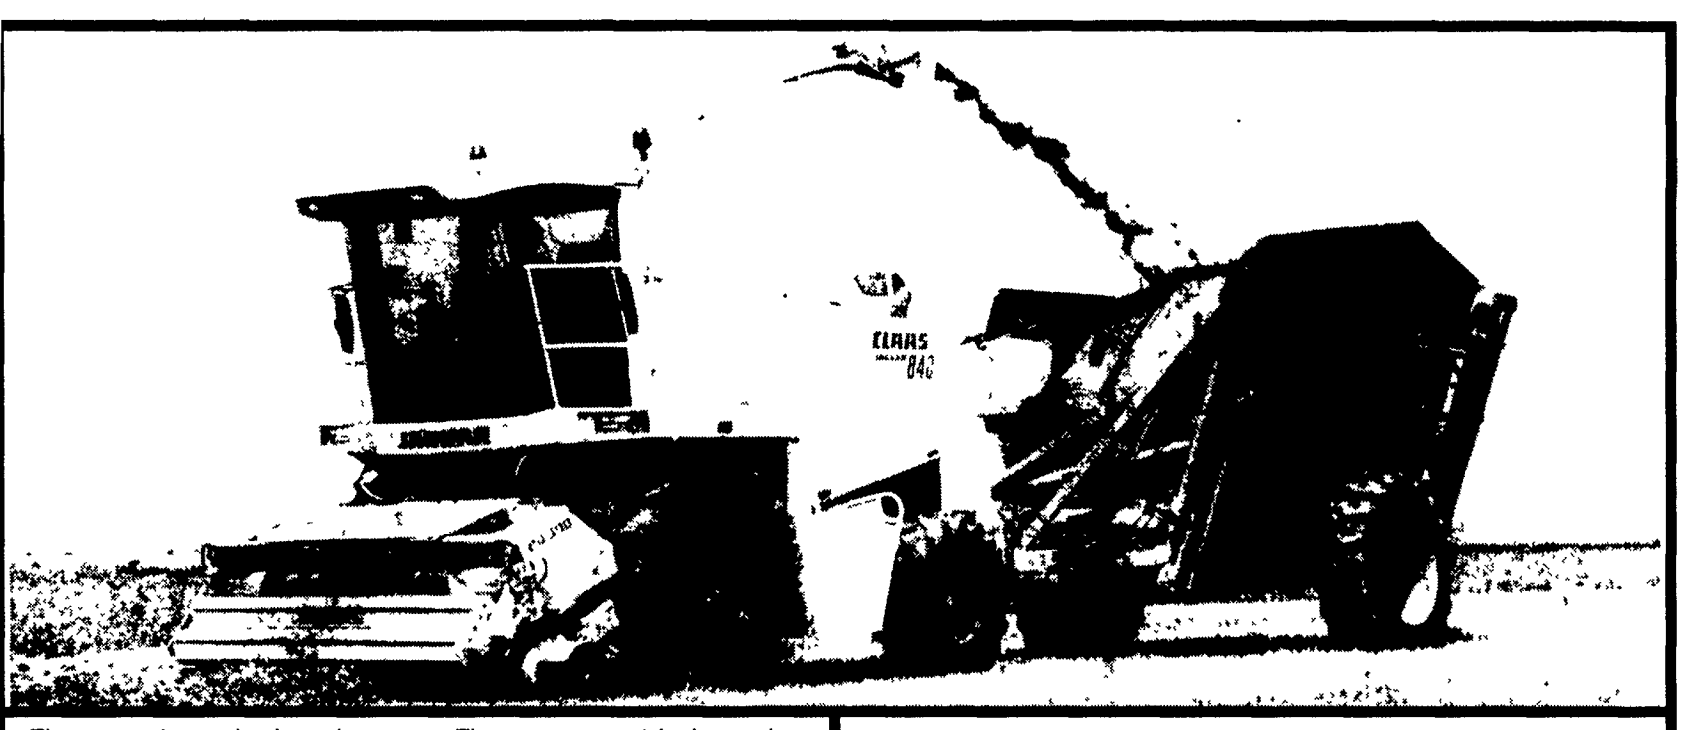
Quicker drying reduces the risk of the mowed hay being rained on, synchronizes the drying of leaves and stems which can reduce leaf shatter, and allows for quicker regrowth of the crop because the hay will not be lying on the stubble for so long.

All of these advantages can result in higher quality hay and improved yields which is equivalent to dollars in the bank.

When properly adjusted, the conditioner should crimp the stem every 3 to 4 inches. The two basic adjustments that affect the extent of crimping are the space between the crimping rolls and the pressure on each roll. The rolls should be adjusted to be as close as possible to each other without touching. Used rolls may not be perfectly round so they will need to be adjusted at the fattest part of the rolls.

The correct amount of pressure on the rolls is not as easily determined as is the space between rolls. Enough pressure should be applied to adequately crimp the stems and not damage the leaves. Damaged leaves are more prone to leaf shatter than leaves that are not damaged. Damaged leaves can be identified because they will turn dark green or black after crimping. There should be less than 5 percent damaged leaves with properly adjusted conditioners.

The frequency that conditioners will need to be adjusted depends on the extent of use and the amount of soil or sand particles that are run through the conditioner. Soil and sand will cause the rolls to wear faster and cause more frequent adjustment.



The corn cracker can be changed in just 5 minutes to switch from corn to hay. The Jaguar's efficient processing produces quality silage for higher milk production thing if they did their trials in Susquehanna County."

Besides farming, Louis also takes time to keep up on the latest information, whether it's related to his job as a director for Dairy Farmers of America, his seat on the board of Mid East UDIA, as a member of the Pa. Dairy Promotion Program, or by reading trade magazines. He is convinced that his seasonal approach to dairying affords him more time to go to the meetings and stay informed. This year is experimental too.

"I haven't tooted my horn much in the last 10 or 12 years because we're so different. I was a little afraid to say what I think, especially to farmers like my DFA members that I represent, but we've lost five dairy farms in this 10-mile area in the past six months and there are only 10 other farms left. So we've lost a third of the dairy farms in this pocket. Some of these guys say they can't farm like Louis Holley, but they couldn't farm the way they were either."

One thing Hawley would like to see is farmers paying more attention to the milk price changes that will go into effect in October as well as general ongoing milk pricing issues.

"There are a couple of things going on right now that farmers just aren't aware of. One is the order change that's coming about on the first of October. We're going to have a wake-up call in October when they change. The prices are going to go down, they're not going to go up. I think the component pricing will hurt the Holstein dairy and that's the majority of the milk. The colored breeds and the mixed breeds like I have might come out ahead on components, but the majority of the milk's going to lose," he said.

"If it doesn't get resolved, we're going to lose big time on that," said Hawley. "We're headed toward deregulation in this country and global markets and that only tells me that some of our milk is going to be priced lower than it has been in the past."

One other area in which Hawley feels potential is being missed is in the marketing of the Conjugated Linoleic Acid Content (CLA) in milk.

"There have been a lot of articles on the CLA content in milk from grazed cattle. The CLA content in milk and meat from grazed cattle is four to five times higher that in confined cattle," he said.

CLA has cancer-fighting properties, according to some recent studies.

"I think this is one thing the dairy industry is missing out on a little bit," he said. "They'll segregate BST-free milk or organic milk, but this CLA thing sounds to me like it might be important or more important and it might be more marketable."

In addition to milk marketing and pricing issues, Hawley is a strong advocate of giving his sons freedom to make decisions on the farm.

Hawley himself began milking cows when he was still in high school. His parents, Wayne and Edna, purchased the family farm in 1950. In the mid 60s, they sold their dairy and went into the insurance business. In 1968, when Hawley was a junior in high school, he began shipping milk in his own name.

"My first major improvement was to purchase a bulk tank. It only took me a year to figure out I didn't like can milk," he said.

Today, Ben, who is in his early 20s, makes most of the decisions about moving the cattle through the pasture system. He also does much of the milking and is fully in charge when Louis travels to a meeting.

The Good, The Bad, And The Ugly

James E. Burmeister
Penn State
Union County Extension

The achievements of U.S. agriculture is a great story that does not get mentioned often enough. Were you aware that agriculture, as an industry, accounts for approximately 13 percent of our gross national product? Or that the agricultural industry provides jobs for almost one in every five people in our workforce?

National cash agricultural receipts are about $4 billion and related economic activity creates an additional $40 million in revenue. I think it is pretty well known that here in the commonwealth agriculture is our leading industry, and dairy is the largest segment. But did you know that dairy is a $1.5 billion industry and that ag exports contribute nearly $1 billion to our state's economy?

Our country enjoys the safest and most nutritious food supply of any nation. Our average food cost is only 10 percent of our disposable income. No other country comes close to that figure. In India, the cost of food represents 60 percent of the population's disposable incomes. Egad!

People in agriculture do not often tout their industry's accomplishments and contributions — and importance. Perhaps we are too modest (maybe), or too busy (like everybody), or too lazy (I hope not). For whatever reason it happens, there could be some bad results because of it. Figuratively speaking, squeaky wheels do get greased while silent things go unnoticed and unattended.

Can you really always blame a person for missing what is not made obvious to them? I'll get to my points now. Our agriculture is a big deal to our country's economic well-being. But the agriculture industry is constantly changing and it is often guided through multifaceted sciences that continue to try and solve very old problems and continually face unique new questions and problems to answer. Our nation's support for agricultural research and education has declined by 10 percent (in real dollars) over the past decade. This could be bad.

A case in point — did any of you see a recent "Nightline" telecast that discussed a farm crisis occurring in the Red River Valley in Minnesota and North Dakota?

I won't go into the whole story, but here are some points that stuck with me. That region produces about 20 percent of the U.S. hard red wheat crop. That is significant.

Twenty-five percent of the wheat producers in that region are expected to exit the industry next year. Hey, prices are low and it's a tough business and there will just be fewer, more cost efficient producers, right? Maybe. Wheat scab is an unsolved disease that affects any producer there, large or small. It is affecting the wheat production in one of our major breadbasket areas.

So — can anybody see where keeping up national agricultural research and education might be more important? Our country can produce enough of most of the foods we know and love, but what if a catastrophic problem comes up and we haven't kept up our ability to solve it ASAP? Importing food is like eating out — costlier to a budget. Many Americans worry about the prospects of our military forces being too forgotten and not being effective in a time of need.

Maybe somehow we need to raise our collective awareness of how truly important ag is to our country's big picture. The result of an ill-equipped defense system or the outcome of inadequate attention to our agricultural needs — either way it could be ugly.

When it comes to improving Relative Feed Value and maximizing the Crude Protein in hay, nothing outperforms the New Idea® 5209 Disc Mower Conditioner. Its high-speed disc cutterbar glides through fields with ease, even in extreme conditions. And the unique Ti-Cor® Conditioning Rolls gently condition the stems, speeding drydown.

The 5209's reliable design keeps you mowing and conditioning year after year. With the segmented cutterbar driveshaft, a New Idea innovation, the cutterbar is truly modular, which makes for easy maintenance.

To see the disc mower conditioner that'll exceed your expectations — not your budget, visit your AGCO® New Idea dealer today.

ECONOMICS OF PURCHASING LOW DISEASE-RESISTANT ALFALFA SEED

Marvin Hall
Penn State Forage Specialist

Each year at about this time, I hear of someone who got a "real deal" on alfalfa seed; however, this year I seem to be hearing it more often than usual. This makes me remember what my parents always said about "getting what you pay for."

Yes, it is true even when purchasing alfalfa seed. Sure you can buy some older alfalfa varieties for a third of what the newer varieties cost, but in the long run you are not really saving money.

Why not?

In the simplistic table below, I have included only the expense and income items that would be different between the use of a newer highly-disease resistant and an older less-disease resistant alfalfa variety. A smashing $30 per acre in initial cost was saved by using the older variety (assuming a 15-pound per acre seeding rate and $3 versus $1 per pound of seed).

Assuming average production for both varieties and a value of $80 per ton of alfalfa, we will have made back the additional seed cost for the newer variety by the end of the first production year. In fact, by the end of the fourth production year, the newer, more disease-resistant variety will have grossed nearly $600 more per acre than the older, less disease-resistant variety which would have been plowed up at the end of the third production year.

	Newer Variety	Older Variety
Expenses
Seed cost ($/acre)	45	15
Potential Income per acre
Seeding year	(2.5 T) $200	(2.5 T) $200
1st Production Year	(4.5 T) $360	(4.0 T) $320
2nd Production Year	(4.5 T) $360	(3.5 T) $280
3rd Production Year	(4.0 T) $320	(2.0 T) $160
4th Production Year	(3.5 T) $280	(0 T) $00
Total Income	$1520	$960

The seed cost is really a relatively small part of the total cost of producing alfalfa. The use of newer varieties that are higher yielding and more disease resistant than varieties that are 15 years old will increase the life expectancy of the alfalfa stand. The longer a stand can remain productive, the more years you have to spread out the high cost of establishing it.

I am not saying that only expensive alfalfa varieties are economical; however, it costs a lot of money to develop and produce a superior variety. Varieties planted in Pennsylvania should have at least moderate resistance to these diseases: bacterial wilt, verticillium wilt, fusarium wilt, anthracnose, and phytophthora root rot. The variety "Vernal" was released nearly 40 years ago and is very inexpensive in today's market. Unfortunately, Vernal is susceptible to both verticillium wilt and phytophthora root rot diseases. If you have a chance to buy a no-name or older variety for a very cheap price, then consider again how much money you are really saving.

Information on the performance of forage species (red clover, alfalfa, orchardgrass, timothy, tall fescue, bromegrass, perennial ryegrass, and reed, canarygrass) in Pennsylvania can be obtained through your county extension office. Ask for the "Forage Trials Report."

How Does Your Hay Compare?

Ever wonder how your hay compares to the best in Pennsylvania? Well, there is still time to get your hay samples ready and enter them in the PFGC Hay Show at Ag Progress Days, Aug. 17-19.

The Hay Show is in the Crops and Soils Tent located at the end of East Fifth Street. By entering your hay in Hay Show at Ag Progress Days, you will automatically be entered in the Hay Show at the Farm Show next January.

The show is not only fun, but you also will receive a quality analysis for each sample entered.

Hay samples delivered to Ag Progress Days on Tuesday, Aug. 17 should be dropped off at the special Hay Sample Drop-Off Point located at the east entrance to Ag Progress Days. This drop-off point has been initiated to avoid difficulties of getting samples to the Hay Show Tent at its new location. Deadline for sample delivery is 10 a.m. Aug. 17.

Forage Crop Pocket Guide Provides Handy Reference

NORCROSS, Ga. — Busy farmers and others involved in forage crop production and grazing management may find answers to everyday questions in a new "Forage Crop Pocket Guide." The 52-page, 3x6½ -inch reference contains numerous lists and tables of information with facts on forage grasses and legumes.

The pocket guide was written by the authors of the popular book, "Southern Forages," which was introduced in 1991. Authors of the book — Dr. Don Ball of Auburn University, Dr. Carl Hoveland of University of Georgia, and Dr. Garry Lacefield, University of Kentucky — also developed the new pocket guide. The new booklet contains some information from the book, but also has additional lists and data. It is intended for use throughout the U.S., not limited to the Southeast.

Examples of the contents include guidelines on calibrating seeders, growth characteristics of various grasses and legumes, forage quality factors, and nutrient removal in harvested forages. Information on forage crop stand establishment, hay and silage harvest and storage, and rotational grazing guidelines are included.

Basic information on animal requirements is also listed.

"The new forage crop pocket guide contains the kind of information most peple don't memorize, but need to access quickly from time to time," said Dr. B.C. Darst, executive vice president of the Potash and Phosphate Institute (PPI). "The booklet is intended to improve management and profitability in forage production through attention to important details."

The new pocket guide was published in 1999 by PPI and the Foundation for Agronomic Research (FAR). It is available for purchase from PPI at a price of $3 each plus shipping/handling of $1 for a single copy. For pricing on larger quantities, contact Circulation Department, PPI, 655 Engineering Drive, Suite 110, Norcross, GA 30092-2837; call (770) 825-8084, fax (770) 448-0439, or visit the web site at www.ppi.far.org.

'Salad' Approach

"I think that when these farmers turn the power of decision over to their sons is real critical as far as the success of the farm," said Hawley. "There's a generation thing all the way through, but somehow we've got to get more young people involved and we're getting less and less involved all the while."

When Hawley travels to his director's meetings, he follows this rule of thumb that was passed on to him by a former DFA director.

"Don't call home, they're going to have to deal with it anyway," said Hawley.

One of the biggest challenges Hawley still faces is the perception held by many that he isn't a real farmer or that he isn't farming at all, even though he was recently honored with a state forage quality award.

"When you quit buying seed from a corn seed salesman, he thinks you're not a very good farmer; when you quit buying a lot of fertilizer from the fertilizer salesman, he thinks you're not a very good farmer; you quit buying feed from the feed salesman, he thinks you're not a very good farmer; you quit calling the vet because your cows are healthier, and he thinks you're not a very good farmer. You've got your cows out harvesting the forage and spreading the manure, so you're not buying nearly as many parts, and your equipment dealer thinks you're not a very good farmer because you're not in there. Pretty soon there's a whole bunch of people who wonder if you're even farming."

Any farmer who is skeptical or curious about the way Hawley is farming today is welcome to come to a pasture walk on his farm on August 27 from 10 a.m. to noon.

"This year our extension agent is marking growth on our pasture. We are beginning to be noticed a lot more and that's rewarding. We certainly don't fit in to the main stream with the higher DHIA records and the breed association meetings and the club sales and that sort of thing. All the farmers are more than welcome to come out to the pasture walk," Hawley said.

PFGC Accepts Memberships

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) has announced membership rates for 1999.

The Council, with your membership and support, can accomplish much toward a better forage industry, environment, and community.

It's a big challenge and the PFGC needs your help. By becoming a member now, PFGC can serve an even more active role in support of the forage industry.

The PFGC, formed in 1960, is made up of individuals and organizations that are interested in forage and grassland-based agriculture. The PFGC is dedicated to the production and utilization of quality forage and grassland.

The PFGC works in a variety of ways to promote the industry, through publication of Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland News, through the publication of Foraging Around, and sponsoring individual workshops, training events, field days, Ag Progress Days, leadership, and other activities.

Every member receives the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland News, the Hay and Forage Grower magazine, and a PFGC membership directory.

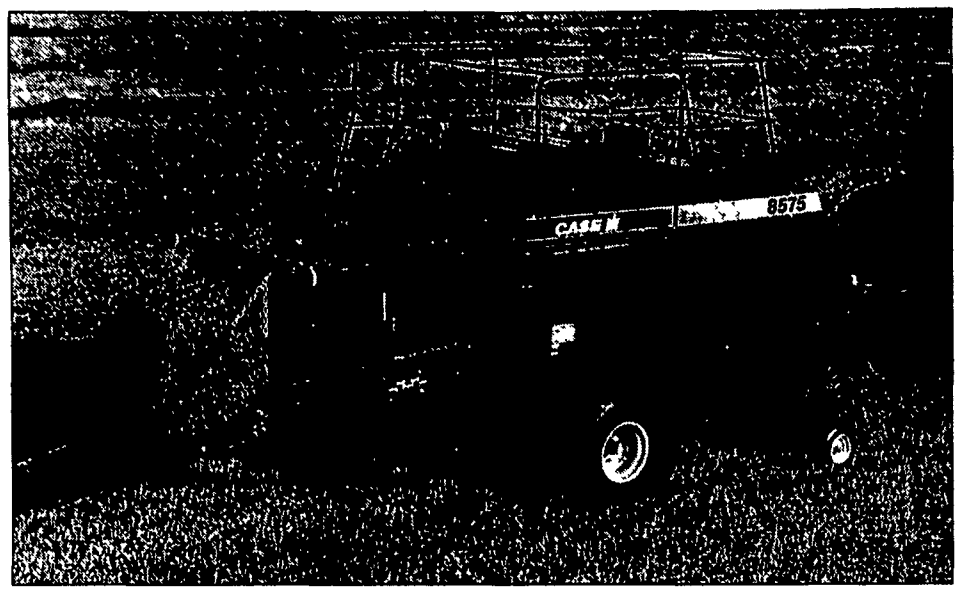
WHY BALERS FROM HOOBER ARE JUST BETTER

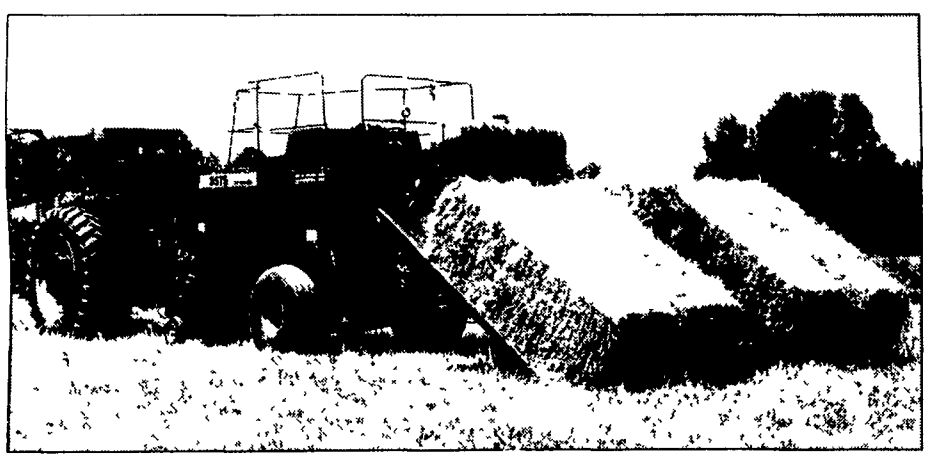
1. HOOBER SALES:

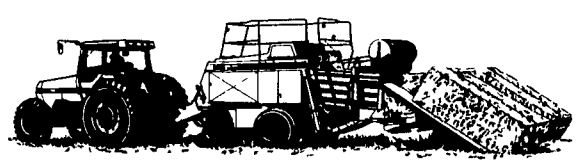
Hoober sells Case IH balers. Case IH has invested in solid engineering and design. Even the small balers have the superior inline design feature, so you can expect outstanding leaf content. Our unique double knotting feature ensures a tighter bale. The patented adjustable stuffer chamber ensures more uniformity from top to bottom. Uniform bales truck and store better. And every baler can be transported without leaving the seat.



2. HOOBER COMMITMENT:

Hoober invests many hours going over new balers before they are delivered, so that the baler is ready to perform at its best in your particular application. When it is delivered, a dedicated Hoober employee will start you in the field, so you learn how to get the most out of the technology at your fingertips. Did you get that service the lasttime you purchased a baler ? ? ? . . .
You did if it came from Hoober ! ! !





3. HOOBER ENHANCEMENTS:

Hoober offers an impressive array of enhancements that separates Hoober from any baler dealer in the East.

A) Hoober will install a knotter blower to ensure your knotter remains dust free and continues to produce tight, uniform bales.

B) Hoober can also install an optional automatic oiler system that will virtually eliminate wear on chains, bearings, and knotters, and save you up to an hour-and-a-half normally spent lubricating your baler.

C) Hoober will also install advanced preservative applicators . . . with your choice of two preservatives. Get into the field earlier and generate high moisture and protein laden bales.

ADVANCED MACHINERY SERVICE

Simply put, a new baler from Hoober is, in fact, better than new.

4. HOOBER SERVICE:

Hoober has five hay and forage specialists who work on balers. With an old-fashioned attitude, they'll service balers quicker and better. Advanced Machinery Service is Hoober's commitment to keep up with technology. Hoober baler technicians never miss a chance to go to school. Each year, Hoober also holds an out of season baler clinic for customers to share service tips and the latest technology.

5. HOOBER FINANCING:

Hoober respects your livelihood and knows your business. Ask Hoober's finance team to tailor a finance or leasing package to fit your budget.
